Chinese Score Hitler Peace Rumor as Aid To Japanese

Unfounded Story Aimed at Impeding Brussels, Delegates Charge.

Tokyo Pessimism Increases Gloom

May Refuse Mediation; Conferees Deadlocked on Note to Japan.

Far Eastern Situation.

The Chinese delegation to the Brussels peace conference asserted a report Chancellor Hitler of Germany might act as umpire in the Far Eastern conflict was circulated to "impede" the work of the already deadlocked conference.

In China, determined Japanese thrusts drove back Chinese troops at Shanghai and on two broad fronts in North China.

Hitler Rumor Scored.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Nov. 5.—The Chinese delegation asserted tonight a report Chancellor Hitler of Germany might act as umpire in the Far Eartern conflict was circulated to "impede" the work of the already deadlocked Brussels conference.

The conference was given additional cause for pessimism when Saburo Kurusu, Japanese Ambassador to Belgium, declared "it is highly doubtful if Japan will accept mediation from the Nine-Power Conference."

These developments came as the delegates reached an impasse over the wording of a peace note to Japan.

Issued for "Confusion."

The Chinese statement, issued after Cheng Tien-fong, Chinese Ambassador to Berlin, arrived in Brussels, said there was "not a single word of truth" in the Berlin report.

"It is quite obvious," the communication said, "the report has been circulated with the ulterior motive of confusing the opinion of delegates to the Nine-Power Conference and impeding its work."

(The Berlin report said Hitler had received preliminary informal requests from both China and Japan to act as umpire in the conflict and that he regarded the requests as so bonafide he ordered Diplomat Joachim von Ribbentrop to return immediately from Rome to undertake negotiations.)

Difficulties over the note to Japan arose this morning when Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Spark submitted a proposed draft to the conference. There were so many objections to the wording that the conference was adjourned for the day.

Delegates Lack Hope.

Delegations tonight were working on a revised draft.

As they worked on the communication there was no great hope among the delegates that Japan would make a favorable reply.

The difficulty they faced was indicated by Kurusu's statement, which said the "present dispute between Japan and China is outside the scope of the Nine-Power Treaty."

"Japan wants to settle her difficulties with China once and for all," he said.

Count Luigi Aldrovandi-Marescotti, Italian representative, suggested the best thing the conference could do would be to invite Japan and China to get together, and then adjourn.

The recipe winning first prize is a molded cranberry and celery salad filled with cubes of crisp celery, slivers of toasted diced apples, almonds and tart. It is a recipe that was served last Thanksgiving. It scored an instant hit and will be repeated on the menu again this Thanksgiving."

Communist Party Has Established Own 'Annapolis' Near West Point; 30 Men Already Graduated to Spread Doctrine on American Ships.

By Edward T. Folliard

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 5.—The Communist Party has established its own "Annapolis" in this country, a Soviet academy for the training of sailors to spread red doctrine in the American Merchant Marine.

It is located at Camp Nitgadaiget, 65 miles north of here, on the outskirts of Beacon, N. Y. On the opposite bank of the Hudson River is Newburgh, where Gen. George Washington had his headquarters in 1782-83. Twenty miles to the south is West Point.

Thus far 30 men have been graduated from the Communist Marine Training School, and a new class now is being formed.

Maritime Union Harbors Some.

Those who have remained ashore have, in the eyes of the Communist Party chieftains, done even better. They have in most cases achieved important positions in the National Maritime Union, seagoing arm of John L. Lewis' C. I. O.

Comrade Frederick (Blacky) Myers, a graduate of the Red Annapolis, is a member of the governing body of the National Maritime Union. So, too, is Comrade Ferdinand E. Smith, a colored Communist from Harlem, and Comrade K. Owens, who is in the engineer division of the N. M. U.

Camp Nitgadaiget, with its red atmosphere, its Soviet symbols and its Moscow jargon, is to the American Communists what Camp Nordland near Andover, N. J., is to Bundsfuehrer Fritz Kuhn's goose-stepping American Nazis.

Hammer and Sickle Displayed.

A huge reservation, the activities of which radiate from a four-story stucco hotel, the Communist camp is just off Route No. 1, the highway to Albany. The hotel is fringed by trees and is approached over a horseshoe-shaped drive.

Over the main entrance to the hotel is the familiar hammer and sickle. Inside, the visitor sees a painting of Lenin addressing the workers, and also pictures of such American Communists as Earl Browder and Israel Amter. The red flag of Moscow is crossed with the Stars and Stripes.

Theoretically, Camp Nitgadaiget is a miniature Soviet Union, and every effort is made to model life here after that in Moscow, even to the extent of having the two sexes bathe in the nude.

Red Slogans Adorn Walls.

The Marine Training School is located in a large classroom in the basement of the hotel. There are no desks. Instead, the students sit at six long tables, facing a large blackboard. On the walls are banners with such slogans as these:

"Communism is 20th Century Americanism."

"A Communist Unit on Every Ship."

The 30 sailors who formed the first class, and who were given an intensive six-week course of training, were carefully selected. They

Seek to Encircle City as Troops Cross Creek; Taiyuanfu Periled.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 6.—The Japanese officially announced today the successful landing of large army units from Hangchow Bay, beginning operations against China on a new front.

(Hangchow Bay, largest inlet on the coast of China, is south of Shanghai. It is approximately 30 miles from Shanghai to the nearest part of the bay.)

Sanguinary but indecisive fighting meanwhile was raging over a battle line stretching from the border of Shanghai's International Settlement westward for 10 miles.

Would Encircle Shanghai.

Japanese spokesmen said the objective of the landings from the bay was to encircle Shanghai and adjoining territory.

They said the army and navy cooperated in the operation, which was successful despite an unfavorable tide, fog and difficult terrain.

The Chinese were reported to have been taken by surprise and Meyer Told Railroad of Decision in Advance, Old Letter States.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators produced evidence yesterday which they said showed Balthasar H. Meyer, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, had informed a Texas & Pacific Railroad official "in confidence" of a forthcoming decision before it was made public.

The investigators read into the record of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee a letter from T. D. Gresham, vice president and general counsel of the Texas & Pacific, to Herbert Fitzpatrick, his superior officer in the Van Sweringen railroad system, in which he reported obtaining the information from Meyer.

Gresham, testifying before the committee when the letter was read, acknowledged that he had obtained the information from Meyer on July 23, 1932. He refused to concede, however, that he obtained it before the commission's decision had been made public. He said he

Blimp Shed May Be Removed As Obstruction to D. C. Airport

The Washington Airport hangar of the Goodyear blimp may soon be moved as an obstruction to air traffic, it was learned last night.

The Virginia Corporation Commission, which regulates airports in the State, has called a hearing November 30, charging that the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., owner of the structure, had failed to obtain a license for its erection.

Proposals to remove the hangar to increase safety of air transport operation have met with little encouragement from the Airline Pilots' Association, which declares that the location of the airport is such that it cannot be made safe anyway.

More stringent regulation of the terminal was brought about by the pilots' threat to boycott the airport unless its use was restricted.

However, it has been suggested that the removal of the building would permit construction of another cross runway, which is badly needed at the terminal.

By eliminating the hangar and filling the lagoon, it has been pointed out, the length of the proposed runway could be increased.

Fight to Ease Profits Levy Gains Power

Return to Provisions of 1936 House Bill Is Advocated.

'Cushioning' Is Favored to Protect Business From Damage.

Strong sentiment for sewing well-padded "cushions" into the undivided profits tax but retaining the full principle of the levy developed yesterday in Treasury-House studies of business tax easement.

Return to the provisions of the 1936 House tax bill was advocated privately by some House committee members. This virtually repealed the old capital stock, excess profits and corporate income taxes, and completely substituted the undistributed earnings tax principle.

The original House measure was remodeled by the last Senate, old corporate taxes were retained, and undivided profits taxes superimposed in a sliding scale. Influential members of the House group favor not only returning to the House bill, but heavy cushioning of the tax against business damage.

Modification Drive Gains.

The snowball movement for modification of both the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains levy continued to roll up, as the House tax subcommittee devoted itself almost exclusively to these tasks, and new support came from the Senate.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, said he was in favor of "modifying or repealing" the undivided profits tax. The South Carolinian said the tax prevents small business from expanding, "which is the only way it can compete with big business."

"It destroys the ability of small business to take care of its employes when we have a depression," said Byrnes. "It also brings insufficient revenue to justify its continuation."

Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, likewise declared for drastic change in the law, echoing views previously expressed by his colleague, Carter Glass.

Small Firms Suffer.

"The small corporations are the ones that are being most seriously damaged," said Byrd. "The law is not injuring the big corporations which have large surpluses already accumulated."

Byrd said the tax has demonstrated its failure to produce revenues. Pointing out that revenue estimates for the current year already have been twice slashed, the Virginian forecast another reduction.

As the House tax subcommittee of nine resumed conferences with Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill and other Treasury and Joint Committee on Internal Revenue experts, the capital gains and losses tax also came up for discussion.

Charts illustrating operations of the capital gain levy were on display as reporters entered the committee room for their daily conference with Chairman Fred M. Vinson.

Vinson Silent On Changes.

Vinson was reluctant to discuss proposed changes.

"There is nothing we can say," he told reporters. "The committee decided to make no announcement."

Vinson said it would "not help the country" to disclose step by step pro-

'I Am Innocent,' Maryland Convict Cries on Gallows

Moundsville, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—William Brown Read, 25-year-old Four Corners, Md., man, dropped through the trap on the gallows at West Virginia penitentiary tonight, protesting his innocence of murder.

Read was condemned to death for the slaying of W. Earle Dollman, young Charleston salesman.

Just before the trap was sprung, Read exclaimed:

"As God is my judge, I am innocent. I did not kill Dollman because I was in Richmond, (Va.) the night he was killed."

Dollman was burned to death in his automobile near Sutton, W. Va., Thanksgiving eve, 1936. Two of Read's companions testified against him at his trial. They accused him of striking Dollman on the head with a revolver and then setting fire to his automobile after Dollman had stopped to offer assistance when Read's car ran out of gas.

Read's companions, Lawrence Gingell, of Kensington, Md., and Joseph Kirby, of Baltimore, are serving life sentences.

Body of 100 Set Up to Fix G.O.P. Policy

Task to Be 'Consideration of Pertinent Issues of Government.'

National Committee to Consult Congressmen on Membership.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Creation of a "program committee" to draft the party's policies and define its stand on governmental issues was approved today by the Republican National Committee.

The chairman and members of the unique group, numbering at least 100, will be selected by the executive body of the national committee after consulting Republican Congressmen and other party chieftains.

Its task will be the "consideration of pertinent policies and issues of government." It will ascertain the views of the "rank and file," national and local leaders and men, women and youth belonging to the various auxiliaries of the G. O. P.

The committee's action shoved deeply into the background the proposal of former President Hoover for a midterm Republican convention next year, while not quite eliminating it.

Victory for Landon.

Observers regarded the committee action as a victory for Alf M. Landon, titular head of the party, over the Hoover forces. Landon's contention that this was not the time for such a convention set in motion yesterday a decisive move against the interim meeting.

Aligned with Landon's opposition were the objections of Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, and Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, while both Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan and Colonel Frank Knox, 1936 Vice-Presidential nominee, asked that decision on the off-year gathering be deferred.

"The committee shall complete its work at the earliest opportunity and shall report its suggestions, recommendations and conclusions to the chairman of the national committee," the resolution establishing the new organization concluded. "He shall thereupon call a meeting of the national committee to determine the most effective and practical manner—whether by a national general forum, conference or otherwise—of presenting the report for the consideration of the nation."

May Expand Group.

The program drafters were authorized to expand their membership if necessary to give adequate representation to "all elements of substantial importance."

The resolution was introduced by

Greenbelt Plunges Into Campaign for Right to Have Pets

So that Towser and Fido may romp with their children inhabitants of Greenbelt yesterday launched a campaign in behalf of pets.

A petition, calling the restriction forbidding the keeping of pets in the model town "harsh and unreasonable" and asking for its repeal by the Farm Security Administration was put into circulation.

"We ask its removal so that the children of Greenbelt may lead normal lives, enjoying the friendship, companionship and protection that good dogs give and to which all children are entitled," the petition concluded.

Logan, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—George Lesci, who wore out a pair of new shoes in 53 hours of lost wanderings through the blackness of a coal mine, came out tonight with a searching party "awful tired, awful sleepy, but not sick."

Lesci had been in the pit since Wednesday afternoon, when he left his loading companion on the way out after work to return for tools.

FRANCIS J. GORMAN JOSEPH P. McCURDY

Labor leaders who deplored the Duke of Windsor's choice of Charles E. Bedaux, industrial engineer, as guide on his American visit, expressed "regret" when they learned Windsor had postponed his trip.

Baltimore Labor Chief Asks 'Prince' to Pick Better Friends.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The Duke of Windsor tonight postponed his trip to the United States for the study of housing and industrial conditions because of "grave misconceptions" over his motives.

Announcement of the postponement came less than 15 hours before the duke, his American-born wife and a staff of seven were to start for a 37-day tour of America.

In a statement issued through Percy Philip, president of the Anglo-American Press Association, the duke said the decision was reached "with great reluctance" because of "grave misconceptions which have arisen and misstatements which have appeared" about the motives and purpose of the tour.

No Date Set for Trip.

No new date for the journey was set and there was no indication what the duke intended to do next.

Late tonight the duke cabled to President Roosevelt extending his regrets and expressing a hope that he might be able to visit the United States at a later date. He also cabled regrets to various private American industrialists who had invited him to visit their factories.

The decision to abandon the trip for the present came after a three-hour conference among the duke, Lee Olwell, press agent; Lieut. Dudley Forwood, the duke's equerry, and others.

The statement added "the duke emphatically repeats that there is no shadow of justification for any suggestions he is allied with any industrial system or that he is for or against any particular political or racial doctrine . . ."

(The Baltimore Federation of Labor last Wednesday "warned" organized labor not to be "taken in" by "slumming parties professing to help him to study labor."

Labor Factions May Share Field As Peace Step

By Robert C. Albright.

Waiving temporary "peace" proposals for the time being, peace negotiators of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization yesterday struck at the heart of the labor split in an effort to agree tentatively on separate fields of jurisdiction.

Hope for a settlement continued to glimmer as both factions reported "definite progress" after three hours of closed conference.

The President meanwhile cast his lot with the peace movement by saying he always has advocated reunion of labor's divided forces. But the President made clear that his Administration has no direct hand in the attempted reconciliation.

Pass Proposed Truce.

In attacking the fundamental issue of which industries shall be opened to the industrial (C. I. O.) form of labor organization, conferees yesterday passed over a proposed temporary truce and suggestions for enlargement of negotiating committees and subcommittees to deal with individual industries.

Only those industries in which there is sharp conflict between the C. I. O. "mass" form of collective bargaining and the A. F. of L. predominantly craft method of unionization were discussed in yesterday's conference.

"We spent all of the time exploring the field of organization and trying to develop which industries may be used for the industrial form of organization," said George

Royal Welcome For Duke Goes Begging Here

Guides for Government Survey Chosen, Elegant Hotel Suite Taken.

This story is written in the interest of "historical accuracy." It tells of outstanding arrangements made here officially and unofficially for the two visits of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, in the course of their American tour, which has been postponed.

State Department officials were arranging not only for the protection of the duke and duchess throughout their visit, but for their greeting by properly informed officials at all Government projects to be visited.

Upon their second visit here, according to Arthur Kudner, Inc., press agent officially representing the duke, his highness was planning to confer with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Took Presidential Suite.

The Presidential suite at the Mayflower Hotel had been reserved for the distinguished visitors. From this apartment, Kudner revealed, the duke was to have broadcast his message to America the evening of November 12.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, who is known to the world as "Aunt Bessie," reserved the suite for the Windsors, along with Charles E. Bedaux, whose name in connection with the projected tour roused the storm of labor criticism and opposition that led to the posponement of the trip.

A private home, just outside Washington, also had been engaged

Anti-Communists To Seek Support In South America

Rome, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Italy's signature of the German-Japanese pact against communism in a formal ceremony at Chigi Palace tomorrow will be a signal for an intensive diplomatic campaign to bring South American nations into the "anti-Red" front, a high Fascist source revealed tonight.

Preliminary soundings already have been made in several South American capitals.

When Italy's signature is attached more than 210,000,000 Germans, Italians and Japanese will be enrolled in the anti-Communist front.

Mrs. Connie de Bower to Wed Raffray After Their Divorces

Another Romance in Series Set Off by Wallis Revealed.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The complicated web of marital difficulties among friends of the Duchess of Windsor assumed a new angle tonight when Mrs. Connie de Bower said she would marry Jacques A. Raffray, New York real estate broker, after he is divorced next week by Mrs. Mary Kirk Raffray, long-time friend of the duchess.

Mrs. de Bower said she will obtain an uncontested divorce before the end of the month from Herbert de Bower, of New York, ending their marriage that began in Greenwich, Conn., in 1928.

Her wedding to Raffray, she said, probably will take place in New York after her return.

Ernest Simpson, British ship broker and divorced husband of the Duchess of Windsor, said in New York yesterday that he planned to marry Mrs. Raffray after her divorce in Reno.

Mrs. Hahn's Case Received by Jury

Cincinnati, Nov. 5 (AP).—A common pleas court jury received tonight the case against Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, charged with the poison-murder of Jacob Wagner, 78, and accused by the State of a series of "slayings for gain." After 51 minutes of deliberation the jury was locked up for the night.

Social Security Gains for Aged Board's Object

Would Permit Those Over 65 to Increase Credits by Further Taxes.

An increase in old-age insurance for men and women already elderly will probably be the next step in the development of social security legislation, Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, asserted yesterday.

His statement came as a program was presented for immediate consideration to a committee of labor and industrial leaders and representatives of the public who gathered yesterday at the Department of Labor to discuss possible changes in the Social Security Act.

The board, he said, is considering asking Congress to permit workers over 65 to continue piling up old-age benefits through payroll taxes. Under the existing law, a worker ceases paying taxes when he attains the age of 65. Therefore, persons now approaching that age would be entitled under the present system to extremely small benefits when they retired.

Taxes Would Continue.

However, he explained, if they continued paying taxes after 65, their monthly benefit checks would be larger when finally they stopped work.

Speaking of technical amendments which the board wished to suggest at the next session of Congress, Altmeyer said:

"Most important is the one which will permit persons who have reached the age of 65 to continue to build up credits under the Federal old-age insurance plan and of course these same individuals and employers would be taxed on their earnings after 65.

"It would not mean, however, that the law would be amended so as to no longer require retirement as a condition to receiving benefits."

Altmeyer also indicated the board might try to have the act amended to cover seamen and employes of State banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System.

Would Include Banks.

"There are," said he, "certain excluded groups like seamen, who have indicated their desire to be included, and we think we have worked out the administrative difficulties that originally suggested they could not be included.

"The State banks, which are members of the Federal Reserve Bank, are now excluded, but the American Bankers Association are desirous of having them included."

Among the conferees brought together were E. R. Stettinius, jr., chairman-elect of the United States Steel Corporation; Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., and such labor leaders as Philip Murray, of the C. I. O., and Matthew Woll, of the American Federation of Labor.

The three other points in the program included the advisability of starting payment prior to January 1, 1942, the date now fixed; the minimum set for beneficiaries and the less-rapid increase of the taxes which create the benefit fund.

James Roosevelt Scores Rule of Few

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son of the President, said today American democracy was prepared "to do whatever needs to be done and to go as far as it needs to go to keep the faith of the many from falling back into the control of the few."

Roosevelt addressed a rally of Catholic students sponsored by the Catholic Youth organization. He described various "isms" as the false gods to which desperate men and women, "hungry for dignity as well as food," turn in their disappointment.

"Today," he said, "our democracy has unshakable economic strength because we have the courage to refuse to be frightened by those who would tell us that we must keep hands off economic laws, because we have the courage to do what needs to be done."

'Bossy' and Mate In Mayoral Race

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Newburyport's mayoral contest became a family affair tonight when Mrs. Louise B. Gillis, wife of the famed Mayor "Bossy" Gillis, filed nomination papers.

Asked if her fiery-thatched husband prompted her to run for mayor, Bossy's attractive brunette wife retorted: "My husband doesn't prompt me to do anything. I'm Mrs. Bossy Gillis. I entered this race because I wanted to, and that's reason enough for any woman."

Bossy is seeking a fourth two-year term as chief executive of this seaside city.

Trade Council Scores Control Of Agriculture

Bankers, Exporters Also Urge Settlement of World War Debt.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 5.—The National Foreign Trade Council declared tonight against "experimental compulsory controls" over agricultural production.

Simultaneously the council—an association of exporters, banks and other interests who term foreign trade essential to American industry—recommended that the United States begin immediately to negotiate a "mutually equitable settlement of the inter-governmental war debt, that will be both realistic and final."

Winding up a three-day convention, the council said in a declaration of policy these negotiations should come "in the interest of integrity and confidence in international credit and finance; in the interest of expediting the eventual stabilization of the world exchanges, and finally in the interest of a furtherance of world trade and world peace."

Asks Concrete Payment.

It added:

"The convention emphasizes that the essence of such a settlement rests upon the recognition of the fact that the payment of any part of the war debts, in the last analysis, can be made only in the form of goods, services and gold."

"We recommend that the recognized and established methods of moving American farm products be undistributed by experimental compulsory controls," the council continued. "The surplus products of the American farm must be sold abroad at world prices and governmental financial aid should be so administered as not to diminish such exports."

Strict Neutrality Hit.

The traders expressed belief "the will of the American people to keep out of war" does not require "inflexible and consequently dangerous mandatory neutrality legislation."

The council recommended amendment of the Philippine independence act to eliminate the Philippine export taxes to be levied beginning in 1941, to extend the period of reciprocal free trade or to establish "adequate" reciprocity advantages for an indefinite period after independence.

3d Party Forecast By Labor Leader

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—The lusty young American Labor Party, training its political siege guns on targets higher than the mayoralty of New York, today traced its birth to reaction of workers against the Liberty League.

"We are convinced," said Alex Rose, executive secretary, "there will be a realignment in politics and possibly a third party in the Nation by 1940. We are convinced that labor then may hold a balance of power nationally as it does today in New York."

Rose said it was wrong to call the American Labor Party "a C. I. O. party." Of its seven leading officers, four are members of the American Federation of Labor, three are of the C. I. O.

State to Appeal Acquittal in Md. Assault Case

Students Protest Clearing of Man Tried for Hitting Campus Officer.

After he had been visited by a deputation of about 20 University of Maryland students, headed by Ralph Williams, assistant dean of men, State's Attorney Alan Bowie announced yesterday he will appeal the case of Lloyd L. Marcus, Hagerstown, Md., salesman, acquitted on charges of assulting Herbert Baker, a student traffic officer.

The episode which led to the accusation against Marcus occurred after the Maryland-Florida football game last Saturday. Baker, a senior at the university and a lieutenant in the R. O. T. C., was on duty at the campus intersection. At the hearing before Police Justice George B. Merrick it was testified that Baker had jumped on the running board of Marcus' machine and put his hand on the driver's shoulder. Marcus, according to witnesses, stopped his car and striding back to the intersection, knocked Baker unconscious with his fist.

The students yesterday complained to Bowie that Justice Merrick had refused to grant a continuance of the case and that only three of approximately nine witnesses had been permitted to testify.

Meanwhile, in an open letter to Justice Merrick, James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer of the American Security & Trust Co., who said he was a witness of the incident, described the acquittal of Marcus as "a mockery to American justice."

Conference on Peace Scheduled in Boston

Boston, Nov. 5 (AP).—A four-day peace conference, with delegates from the United States and abroad, will convene here Monday under the auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

Foreign delegates will include Lord Robert Cecil, co-author with President Wilson and Gen. Jan Smuts of the League of Nations; Mme. Malaterre-Sellier, of France, famous war nurse, and Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador to the United States. United States Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, also will speak.

Bankers Move To Press Views On Legislation

2 Speakers Tell Investment Men Washington Is Key to Stock Slumps.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 5.—The Investment Bankers Association launched a dual program today to take "a progressive and aggressive stand" in matters of legislation, and to make membership in the association "a badge of integrity and worth."

Its board of governors announced to its annual convention a redrafting of the association's constitution and by-laws, involving tightening of membership requirements, and strengthening of executive personnel.

Look to Washington.

At the same time, two speakers before the day's sessions looked to Washington for solutions to the problem of the present slump in the securities markets, which has brought the investment bankers' business of raising capital for industry almost to a standstill.

Edward B. Hall, of Chicago, president of the association, said it was no more fair now to blame the current slump on the Government than it was to blame the 1929-32 decline on the investment bankers.

But he described the recent tumble in securities as definitely reflecting a lack of confidence in the future of business, and said the administration could do much to restore it by revising the capital gains and undivided profits taxes, by improving the financial situation of the railroads and conditions affecting the utilities, and in general "maintaining conditions under which business can function and meet its pay rolls and provide a return on the capital which will serve as a stimulus to futher savings."

Future Doubtful.

Dr. John H. Williams, professor of economics at Harvard and vice-president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, the second speaker, said, "as matters now stand, probably no one can say with entire confidence whether we are facing a minor or a major depression," but he was hopeful of early resumption of the recovery trend, through encouragement of private investment.

Sugar Imports Nearing Quotas

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported that off-shore producing areas had supplied all but 563,385 tons of their 1937 raw sugar quotas.

These areas shipped, during the first 10 months of this year, 4,597,267 short tons, raw value, to this country.

Cuba has supplied 1,929,371 of its quota of 2,11,987 short tons; the Philippines 915,748 of 998,499; Puerto Rico 854,661 of 883,303; Hawaii 800,046 of 1,038,333; Virgin Islands 5,516 of 9,869, and foreign countries, other than Cuba, 91,925 of 114,641.

In the Day's News

CONSERVATIONISTS yesterday launched an attack on a Nation-wide front against conservation provisions of the Government reorganization bill backed by the President and scheduled to be taken up by the coming special session of Congress.

Over 50 conservation organizations united in protesting that the bill's provisions "do violence to reason" and announced their intention to "take the issue to the people." They objected to the creation of a "Department of Conservation" by "bestowing that name upon the old Interior Department and by giving the President power to transfer thereto any conservation agency of the Government except the Engineer Corps of the Army and the Mississippi River Commission." Also they condemned the provision giving the President power to appoint, irrespective of Civil Service, the head of any bureau or agency which in his judgment is "policy-determining in character," on the grounds that it opens the door to political patronage in important positions in the conservation services.

Leaders in the fight by the conservation groups are Gifford Pinchot, Henry S. Graves, Jay N (Ding) Darling, Arthur Newton Pack and George W. Wood.

THE TENTH monthly report of the Sugar Section of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, shows that 4,597,267 short tons of sugar, raw value, were charged against quotas of all off-shore producing areas, including the full-duty countries, during the 10-month period from January to October.

There were 186,805 short tons of sugar, raw value, charged against the quota for continental sugarcane areas and 974,458 short tons, raw value, against the quota for the continental sugar beet area, during the first nine months of this year, the report added.

HEAVIER HOGS, but lower prices for them, was yesterday's forecast for 1938 pork marts by the Agriculture Department. They predict the increased weight of hogs on the market will more than make up for the decrease in numbers expected on the market next year.

Total supplies of hog products during the current marketing year, ending September 30, 1938, will be about the same as this year, the Department said, but based their prediction of lower prices on a falling demand, particularly from aboard.

VARIOUS PHASES of the poultry and egg industry are due to show improvement during 1938, according to a Bureau of Agricultural Economics forecast yesterday.

More broiling chickens, higher egg prices, due to a fall in the amount of eggs available, lower feed prices and a higher price for turkeys, all point to more profits for poultrymen in 1938, the bureau indicated.

About 200,940 acres of some of the most rugged and picturesque areas in the central portion of the Sawtooth Mountains in central Idaho was yesterday made a "primitive area" by administrative order of Chief Forester F. A. Silcox, of the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture, announced yesterday.

CARLOADING of revenue freight for the week ended October 30 totaled 771,655 cars, a 5.3 per cent decrease below the corresponding week in 1936, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

This week's carloadings also fell 1,698 cars, or .2 per cent below last week's figure, the association said. Miscellaneous freight alone showed an improvement, with an increase of 4,954 cars over the preceding week, but this figure also represented a decrease of 21,596 cars below the corresponding week of 1936.

The National Association of Manufacturers yesterday laid down a "yardstick" of high ethical standards in all business operations for the industries of the Nation.

In a report already approved by its board, the N. A. M. endeavored to answer "those who challenge industry to put its own house in order," while admitting that "it is true a small element in private enterprise has abused its privileges and that some individual manufacturers and businessmen have failed to accept the responsibilities of business to society."

The report recommended that private enterprise and property demonstrate "their basic worth to the public" by informing the public of the accomplishments of American private enterprise, exposing the fallacies of "proposals to abolish or cripple the American private enterprise system," and by "adherence by all business to well-tested and high principles of conduct."

Red Cross Allots $40,000 to China

An additional allotment of $40,000 was made yesterday to Ambassador Nelson Johnson, in China, by the American Red Cross to purchase medical supplies for hospitals there, it was announced by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman.

A previous grant of $3,000 had been made through Ambassador Johnson to the Margaret Williamson Hospital in Shanghai to provide maternity and medical care for women and child refugees and another of $5,000 to the International Relief Committee at Soochow.

Benefited by the recent grant will be the Huchow General Hospital, American missionary institution; the Nanking University Hospital, caring for refugees, and the Chinese Red Cross Society Hospital in Nanking.

Council on Cancer Will Meet Tuesday

The first meeting of the National Advisory Cancer Council will be held next Tuesday at 9:30 a. m., Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the U. S. Public Health Service announced yesterday. Dr. Parran is chairman ex officio of the group, which will draft policies of the National Cancer Institute.

"While this is the first executive session of the council, we expect to have some very important considerations of our various problems," said Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, executive director. "Reports will be presented on the current research in cancer being conducted in the National Institute of Health by Prof. Carl Voegtlin and on plans for its promotion and expansion."

Profits Tax Easing by Return To 1936 House Bill Favored

ceedings before some conclusions were arrived at.

"The main criticism is directed against the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains tax, but we can't give out discussions in executive session. We are working in complete harmony with the Treasury, and the Treasury with us. There is no war between us."

Recognizing business "hardships" under the present tax structure, Vinson said the committee would take "just as much time as necessary to get down to the bottom of this thing."

Vinson was the sponsor of the so-called "cushions" written into the 1936 House bill, but they failed of final enactment in the form he offered them. He said yesterday that the "cushions" finally written into the 1936 act were "confirmed not only by the Treasury, but by the President."

An informed member of the committee added:

"Some of us are thinking along the lines of the original House bill, which conformed to the President's tax message in 1936."

It was pointed out that this measure not only contained the Vinson "cushions" but applied the full principle of the undivided profits tax by eliminating such present levies as the capital stock, excess profits and corporate income taxes. But some members of the sub-committee are known to favor going much further than this in easing inequities on the business tax structure.

FINER TASTE DID IT! Official figures in the 14 states* that keep a record of liquor sales show that—

1. Blends are gaining. Since July 1935, blended whiskies have steadily increased in sales.

2. Crowns are leading. For 19 months the sales of Seagram's CROWNS have exceeded the combined sales of seventy-nine other leading brands of blended whiskies in their price class.

The only possible answer is—that Crowns are finer—that Crowns taste better, and men are discovering the difference. Seagram's 80 years of experience is bearing fruit. Today 5 and 7 Crown are indisputably the "finest of the finer blends".

Reich, Poland Reach Accord On Minorities

By the United Press

Berlin, Nov. 5.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler announced tonight the Reich and the Polish government, after three months of negotiations, have agreed to a reciprocal policy governing the treatment of the Nazi minority in Poland and Poles living in Germany.

Simultaneously der Fuehrer ordered the release of a group of Polish minority leaders held in Nazi prisons for illicit political activities.

The agreement, designed to end recurring friction and disorders in the frontier regions of both countries and buwark the German-Polish agreement of January, 1934, provides: Both Germany and Poland are prohibited from any attempts to assimilate the minorities, or question their status; guarantees of the free use of minority languages in private and public life; freedom of minority organizations; use of minority languages in schools; equality of rights in professional and business relations; freedom of minority religious teachings and charitable institutions.

Papa Dionne Buys Christmas Gifts, But Not 5 of Kind

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Oliva Dionne, the quintuplets' father, went Christmas shopping for them and his other children in New York yesterday.

This business of getting five of each thing is getting tiresome, he decided, so he bought them different toys, like this:

Yvonne—Pink metal tea wagon.

Annette—Red cleaning set, including shovel, broom and mop.

Marie—Laundry set, with iron, ironing board and clothespins.

Roosevelt Declares Gambling a Danger

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt pointed an admonitory finger again yesterday at stock speculation.

In his first comment on the market since last month's declines wiped out billions of dollars in security values, the President told a press conference it was dangerous to gamble in stocks.

If it were not dangerous everybody would make money at it, he added.

His advice was in response to the question of whether he contemplated any new moves to make dealings in securities less risky.

All flood-control projects which have won Congressional authorization will be completed, the President said later.

The President will leave November 24 for his annual visit to Warm Springs, Ga., to act as host at a Thanksgiving Day party for crippled children undergoing treatment there.

He said he would stop Thanksgiving morning at Gainesville, Ga., to make a speech dedicating a parkway named for him.

R. Walton Moore Injured in Crash, 2 Women Unhurt

R. Walton Moore, counselor for the State Department, was slightly injured, and two women passengers in his automobile escaped unhurt when the machine was sideswiped by another on the Lee-Jackson highway in Fairfax County, Va., early last night. Moore was being driven to his Fairfax home by a chauffeur.

Edward L. Harris, colored, 20, of Annapolis, driver of the other car, was held in Fairfax jail on a technical charge of reckless driving. Sheriff E. P. Kirby of Fairfax County said an investigation showed Harris was driving too near the center of the highway and at a high rate of speed. Harris' light automobile turned over twice after the collision, but Harris escaped with scratches.

In the automobile with Moore were Miss Helene Mitchell, of Fairfax, and Moore's niece, Miss Mary Walton McCandlish. Neither was injured.

Safe With Mother After Kidnap Attempt

Daylight Kidnaper Drops Baby As D.C. Mother Screams Alarms

Mrs. Mary Busser, Alarmed by Knock on Door, Rushes to Street as Woman Snatches Infant From Carriage; Grandson of U. S. Consul Unharmed.

A mother's intuition yesterday frustrated an apparent attempt to kidnap her 3-month-old son, as he slept in a carriage outside of their home, 4817 Third street northwest. The mother, Mrs. Mary Busser, reached the front door of her apartment in time to see a woman snatch the child from the carriage.

Apparently alarmed by the mother's screams, the woman threw the child about 5 feet into the carriage and fled to a waiting auto. A man, according to Mrs. Busser, was at the wheel of the car.

The infant, William Bradley Busser, grandson of Ralph C. Busser, American consul general in Leipzig, Germany, was unharmed.

A short time before the kidnaping was attempted, Mrs. Busser was in the kitchen of her first-floor apartment, dressing her 16-month daughter, Alice Mary.

"I heard a knock on the front door of the apartment," she recalled, "but I didn't go to the door, thinking it was just another salesman."

She became suspicious shortly after, Mrs. Busser said, when more knocks sounded on the doors of the other apartments in the duplex building.

"Just then something told me to run to the front door," she said. "I knew that my son was in danger. Looking out of the window, I saw a woman carrying my boy away. I screamed and she threw him in the carriage."

"I can't think of anyone who would attempt to steal my child," the father, wholesale ice cream dealer, told police.

Detective J. C. Broderick, of the Sixth Precinct, said the woman had apparently tried all four doors of the apartment house to assure herself that no one was at home.

Mrs. Busser described the mysterious woman as dark-complexioned, wearing a brown-tweed coat and about 5 feet 1 inch tall.

The car was a sedan, and as nearly as Mrs. Busser could make out, bore Pennsylvania license tags. She could not describe the driver.

The family originally lived in Philadelphia, police were informed.

Loyal Bombers Leave Franco's Base in Flames

By the United Press.

Madrid (Saturday), Nov. 6.—A Spanish Loyalist air fleet of 40 planes raided and bombed the rebel Aragon base at Zaragoza last night. Tremendous explosions indicated the munitions depot within the walled city had been hit.

A defense ministry communique said that, until now, loyalist planes have refrained from bombarding cities, but were forced to attack such military objectives as Zaragoza because of "the heavy effectives concentrated there."

Accepts Volunteers Plan.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 5.—Rebel Generalissimo Franco tonight accepted the nonintervention committee's proposal to remove foreign volunteers from Spain in return for belligerency rights, provided the loyalist government agrees to the plan.

Loyalist officials in Barcelona said they would agree if members of commissions appointed to count foreign troops in Spain actually are neutral and carry out their duties without delay.

Insurance Murder Gets Chair for Two

By the Associated Press.

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 5.—A circuit court jury convicted three St. Louisans today of murder in connection with the wedding-day slaying July 3 of William Kappen, fixing death as the punishment for two of them and 99 years in prison for the third.

Electrocution was ordered by the jury for Mrs. Marie Porter, sister of Kappen, and 22-year-old Angelo Ralph Giancola, John Giancola, Ralph's 20-year-old brother, whom he had attempted to clear of complicity, was given the prison term.

Ralph Giancola testified Mrs. Porter offered him $800 to kill her brother so that she might collect $3,300 in insurance before his fiancee was made beneficiary.

Japanese Land From Bay South Of Shanghai

Seek to Encircle City as Troops Cross Creek; Taiyuanfu Periled.

The Japanese declined to state number of troops involved or the points at which they landed.

South of Hangchow Bay, Chinese reported they repulsed six attempts by Japanese marines to land on Yuhwan Island, between Wenchow and Taichow, under cover of a naval barrage.

Claim Tokyo Ship Sunk.

Chinese also announced antiaircraft batteries shot down two Japanese naval scouting planes, killing six members of the crews.

Earlier determined Japanese thrusts drove back Chinese troops at Shanghai and on two broad fronts in North China.

A Japanese surprise attack forced out Chinese defenders from four villages on the south bank of Soochow Creek in the first decisive engagement since the Chinese retired to their "winter line" west of Shanghai.

Under cover of a brisk attack by the small Japanese units which yesterday established a foothold south of the Soochow at Rubicon Village, 3,000 Japanese forced a crossing 2 miles farther west.

Japanese spokesmen asserted the Japanese forces now held an area about two-thirds of a mile deep south of the creek, which fronts the right flank of the Chinese line 3 miles west of Shanghai.

In the rich North China province of Shansi the Japanese army was reported nearing the gates of the capital, Taiyuanfu. The fall of the city was considered imminent.

(A Japanese communique issued at Peiping said the Chinese retreat was general, with 30,000 troops fleeing to the south. A detachment of 5,000 Chinese supported by 20 heavy guns, the communique said, was making a last stand a few miles north of Taiyuanfu.)

The walled city of Changtefu, just across the border in northern Honan Province, was reported captured by the Japanese column advancing down the Peiping-Hankow railroad through Hopei Province. The Chinese were said to have left 500 dead when they evacuated the city.

Los Angeles, Nov. 5 (AP).—Union Oil Co. announced today it had brought in the second deepest producing oil well in the world, which, by extending the San Joaquin Valley producing area, may result in the largest oil field in America, with the possible exception of the east Texas region.

The well, near Shafter, Calif., is 11,302 feet deep and initial production was at the rate of 2,400 barrels daily of 39.6 gravity clean oil.

Death Leap Sequel To Morals Charge

Detroit, Nov. 5 (AP).—Edward Van Horne, 35, assistant professor of English at Wayne University here, plunged to his death from the sixteenth floor of a hotel today a few hours after he was arraigned on a morals charge. His body landed on a terrace three stories from the street level.

Arrested on a charge of accosting and soliciting, Van Horne stood mute when arraigned before Judge Christopher E. Stein, who placed him under $1,000 bond and ordered a psychiatric examination. Police said he apparently went to the hotel directly after his release on bail.

Auto Hits Pole, 3 Men Suffer Skull Injuries

Nurse Seriously Hurt When Hit by Bus Near Walter Reed Hospital.

Five persons were in local hospitals last night seriously injured as the result of automobile accidents in the District yesterday.

Miss Ida Mae Gano, 23-year-old nurse, was hurt when she was struck by a passenger bus while crossing Sixteenth street near the entrance to Walter Reed Hospital. According to police the bus was operated by Franklin F. Richardson, 25, of 5724 Third street northwest, an employe of the Capital Transit Co.

Three men injured yesterday when their car hit a light pole on the Q street bridge abutment, were still in serious condition at Emergency Hospital. They were John A. Keal, 35, of Richmond, Va.; George Baldwin, 31, of 1365 Kennedy street northwest, and Thomas S. Pitt, 34, of 239 Concord avenue northwest.

Pitt was still unconscious last night. All suffered skull fractures. Keal and Pitt also received leg injuries.

Nichi Nichi Editor Sees Japan Favorable to Roosevelt Truce

President's Plea More Acceptable Than 9-Power Mediation, Takaishi Feels; Suggests America Join Nippon in Exploiting North China.

The Japanese government will accept a truce in the war with China if President Roosevelt proposes it, Shingoro Takaishi, editor and publisher of the Tokyo Nichi Nichi and Osaka Mainichi, stated as his opinion at a press conference yesterday at the Mayflower.

Considering Roosevelt's Chicago "quarantine" speech as an admonition rather than a partisan statement, Takaishi said he felt a peace suggestion emanating from America alone would be better received in Japan than offers of mediation from the Brussels conference.

Director of two of the most powerful dailies in the Japanese empire, with a reputed 3,000,000 circulation, Takaishi recently arrived in America unofficially to explain the Japanese viewpoint in the present struggle. He leaves Washington today for New York.

Professing ignorance of the details of Hitler's proposals to act as umpire in the Sino-Japanese dispute, Takaishi indicated a peaceful solution would not come from the direction of Berlin.

Admits it Is "War."

With an emphatic denial his countrymen are aiming at territorial aggrandizement in North China, Takaishi insisted the war is being pursued to insure Chinese friendship for the Japanese, as well as to preserve order and security in the provinces bordering on Manchukuo. He employed the term "war" without hesitation.

Takaishi said it was his impression Prime Minister Fumimaro Konoye, with whom he spoke shortly before leaving Japan, would be satisfied if no Japanese troops were left in North China and order were intrusted to the Chinese peace preservation corps. Sentiment exists in Japan, he said, favoring American co-operation in the economic exploitation of the five provinces.

"We couldn't afford to annex North China," Takaishi declared. "Manchukuo is proving very costly." He added, however, that restoration of Manchukuo to China proper was "unthinkable."

Discounting actual incidents which provoked hostilities, Takaishi maintained the real goal of the Japanese armies was elimination of anti-Japanese propaganda and sentiment in China. This result will be attainable, he said, when the Chinese nationalist leaders are brought to terms. "Ninety per cent of the Chinese people have no feeling about Japan one way or the other," he declared. "All that is necessary is for the leaders to change their point of view."

Essential For Prestige.

Furthermore, Takaishi stated, the war was inevitable if Japanese prestige were to be preserved. Military victory over China would convince the latter Japan was not to be despised, he said.

Comparing the position of the United States in America to that of his country in Asia, Takaishi asserted a strong power in the Orient was a necessity.

Reds Prepared, Envoy Warns World's Armies

Drive on Communism Is Screen for Attacks, Troyanovsky Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 5.—A warning to the armies of the world against matching their strength "with our Red army on the battlefield" was sounded tonight by Alexander A. Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to the United States.

In an address prepared for delivery at Carnegie Hall, marking the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the U. S. S. R., he assailed what he described as "the aggressive tendencies of certain countries which want to jump on us at any moment." Troyanovsky declared Russia today is "ready for any emergency . . . for the defense of our borders."

The Soviet Minister said that in the 20 years since the October revolution "the dream of Lenin to take the Russian farmer from the horse and put him on the tractor has been fulfilled." Soviet agriculture, he said, now has nearly 450,000 tractors.

"Instead of 25,000,000 separate small farms we now have about 250,000 co-operative farms equipped with modern machines, combines and tractors."

He said certain countries "have rasied a clamor about their fight gainst bolshevism and communism in order to create a smokescreen for attacks against other parts of the globe."

Italy, Reich Pacific, Goebbels Contends

Berlin, Nov. 5 (AP).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, tonight ridiculed the idea that the friendship of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy meant war.

"They are the only nations in Europe which are in agreement on methods to solve European problems peaceably," he told a mass meeting of 10,000 amid loud cheers.

Goebbels devoted a large part of his speech to tirades against Bolshevists, Jews and the church. Those who tell the woes of the church to foreigners, he threatened, will soon have their mouths stopped.

Another outbreak occurred when a gang of terrorists ambushed a mounted police patrol on Bethlehem road. There were no casualties.

St. Patrick's Church Site Cost $400, Now Worth Half Million

Oldest Catholic House of Worship in Capital Built in 1794; Only Eight Priests Have Served in Parish's Long History.

The site of St. Patrick's, the oldest Catholic church in Washington, cost members of the parish 80 pounds when they purchased it in 1794. The value of the land has increased since then to more than $500,000, but the initial price was such a burden on the parishioners that it took them ten years to pay it.

Even when the payment was complete their difficulties were not over. They managed to finance a building of sorts, but could not afford a belfry. So the church bell hung from a wooden standard in the yard until 1810, when a brick structure was completed. Again the young parish's resources apparently were exhausted, for the new building had no pews and members were forced to bring their chairs to church with them.

St. Patrick's was the first church in Washington to have an organ. The instrument was purchased from the Episcopal Church in Dumfries, Va. Work on the present building was begun in 1872 and completed in 1884.

Of Potomac bluestone trimmed with limestone and ornate Gothic design, the church is conspicuous for the contrast it presents to the commercial structures which surround it at Tenth and G streets. Stair towers flank the main facade of the building, with its arched entrance and huge rose windows. An octagonal baptistry at the northern end of the facade separates it from the rectory, which connects with the St. Patrick's Academy for Girls on G street.

Father Caffery, founder of the church, returned to Ireland in 1805. His successor, Father William Matthews, served for nearly half a century and is responsible for organizing the ungainly young parish into the distinct organization which it is today. First resident of Maryland to be elevated to the priesthood, parish priest of all Washington and president of Georgetown University, Father Matthews has been called "a giant among contemporaries."

The church has had only eight pastors in its long history. The Msgr. C. F. Thomas is the present one.

Today's Sermon

By Dr. W. S. Abernethy,
Pastor, Calvary Baptist Church.

Text: "I have been nearly sentenced to death by the community." Prov. 5:14 (Moffat).

"The neighborhood had been gossiping about him. That evidently is what this plaintive cry means. Somebody had started a whispering campaign and like wild fire the news had traveled. In the end it broke a man's heart. That is what gossip usually does.

The city streets are full of assassins. To be sure they are not armed with automatic pistols or sawed-off shotguns. They are not desperate characters who do their work under cover of darkness. They move in the best circles and carry on their murderous work in the full glare of the day. They would not for the world do bodily injury to anyone. They are good people, excellent people. They regard themselves as highly desirable citizens and such they are in most respects. But how they do love to get hold of a choice morsel of gossip. When they pass it on of course they are always careful to say, 'this is strictly confidential you understand, not to be repeated to a soul.' And the person to whom it is told is likewise careful to add the same word of caution when he tells it. With astonishing rapidity it spreads and the racier the morsel, the faster it travels. Assassins such people are, and of the worst sort. The cruelties of other days they do not practice, nor would they think of doing so. Their methods are more refined, more civilized, more modern. But the results are about the same. Instead of taking life, they blast reputations and blacken characters. What else are they than assassins?

A man's character is his most valuable possession, more valuable even than his reputation. His reputation is merely what the community thinks he is and the community may be wrong. But his character—that is what he really is. It is of more value to a real man than his life. And yet there are people who go about the business of defaming another's character on evidence of the flimsiest sort. Criminal libel laws are on the stateue books, but they catch very few of the culprits. Character assassins go boldly, if clandestinely, about their work of breaking hearts and blasting reputations and ruining characters and seldom are they apprehended.

Hold your tongue is good advice. It runs wild so easily and once loose its destruction is beyond computation.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Big Push

The United Federal Workers of America understandably have put their shoulders against the current big push for the 5-day week—and sensibly, it seems—will take the issue to its most proper jurisdiction, the people of the Nation. The U. F. W. A. intends, specifically, to go on the air "in order to tell the American people how desirable this legislation is for the Nation as a whole, as well as for Government employes." And while this is being done, other groups, notably the A. F. G. E., will hammer at the Hill; and then, perhaps, with the people back home prodding theirr congressmen (that is, if sufficient interest can be aroused in the people back home) something thatis a real 5-day week may come more swiftly than has come other well-meant proposals for Uncle Sam's faithful.

Some time ago, this column was given a preview of the dioramas that are being set in Interior's new building by way of affording all citizens a sparkling glimpse of the historic rock from which the vast department has hewn. The column flung, thereupon, several enthusiastic fits in blue rhapsody and wished the time might hasten when all men could view sights so engaging. Now, is it learned, the opening gate is as far away as January, maybe February. The trouble is not slowness in preparation, but painstakingness of preparation. At the moment, the museum division artists are placing in the show cases, which will be laden with rare exhibits. The dioramas have been placed, but there is tremendous detail yet to be accomplished.

N. F. F. E. Local No. 2 is calling for all grieving tenors, barber shop barytones and all the assortment of tap dancers and entertainers otherwise to participate in the "huge and gala" theater party to be held at the Rialto on Thursday, December 2. The program calls for a feature picture, shorts subjects and ten acts by amateurs. There will be three prizes. The amateur show will be directed by Harold Stepler (GAO), well known to Civic Theater work. The entire house has been taken over for the occasion, writes Lee H. Shugar, who is pushing the arrangements.

Funfest

The Pierce Hall Players' recent comedy success, "Boy Meets Girl," will be repeated as the feature attraction of the Interstate Commerce Commission's annual funfest in the Governmental Auditorium, November 18.

When the production was first offered last month as the Players' opening vehicle, subsequent drama notices came to the attention of Maj. Lee F. Hamm, program director of the Five Points Club, I. C. C. social organization. Promising a capacity audience in the huge auditorium, Maj. Hamm secured the Pierce Hall group for a repeat performance.

Recognition comes to the National Capital Parks Schola Cantorum with an invitation to sing the Christmas carols when the National Christmas Tree is lighted by the President in Lafayette Park on December 24. Rehearsals will be held each Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in suite 905, 1317 F street northwest.

Notes

Again, FCA reminds that parking space will be re-assigned, effective November 15; applications should be filled in and returned to Room 138 immediately . . . This matter of parking is one of the worries on the bosom of the A. F. G. E. District Department. Some two years ago they began figuring on a self-liquidating underground garage that Uncle Sam might build for his parking-bothered workers. The other night, the same resolution was hauled out of the bag, and disappeared, head first, into "channels" again. The department was particularly bothered about what's going to become of us all when the big parking lot behind Labor is landscaped into something more beautiful, and the department was actually fractious about all this ticket "fixing" and properly denounced it with signed and sealed resolution . . . The U. F. W. A. should be congratulated on the attractive folder announcing its Federal Workers School of the District of Columbia. A trim sheet it is, which says in part that a limited number of scholarships will be awarded to members of C. I. O. unions. These will go, for example, to committee members whose work will become more effective through attendance in a particular class. Others will be awarded on the recommendation of the officers of local unions . . . Robert F. Freund's FCA Chorus will present a program featuring Stephen Foster's songs at 8:30 o'clock this evening in the conference room of the Departmental Building, Constitution avenue and Thirteenth street. Before going read something about the life of Foster (if you haven't already). It is tremendously interesting. A feature will be readings in Southern dialect by Arthur C. Bernard . . . An announcement from the FCA Lending Library: "There are still a number of books for sale in the lending library. Prices have been reduced to: Fiction, 25 cents; mystery, 15 cents." Which is undoubtedly all that some mystery and fiction was worth to begin with, but we're not trying to dampen your sale. We're simply thinking of those $2.50 and $4 authors and the end that came to their art . . . While local weather grows cold around us, Robert H. Alcorn, retirement authority (there is only one other, the N. F. F. E.'s capable Mr. Biller), is sunning around Charleston, S. C., Pensacola and other bright spots. He will be back with the opening of Congress.

New Trial Denied McAffee in Slaying

Over-ruling a motion for a new trial, Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in District Court yesterday, announced he would pronounce sentence upon William (Major) McAffee, 61-year-old colored janitor, who last week was convicted of slaying Mrs. Henrietta Anderson, 36-year-old mother of three children.

Mrs. Anderson, a clerk in the Veterans' Administration, was found beaten to death in the bedroom of her small apartment on L street northwest, on the morning of August 22. The janitor was arrested shortly afterwards and was convicted after police said he admitted beating her over the head with a heavy furnace shaker.

Only one sentence—electrocution—is permissible under District law. At the time he imposes the punishment, Justice Adkins will fix the date on which the diminutive colored man will be put to death in the District Jail electric chair. McAffee is being held in death row at the jail.

Police Car Frustrates Attempt to Rob Autoist

The attempted robbery of a motorist on Third street near Virginia avenue southwest was frustrated yesterday by the arrival of a police cruiser patrolling the area. Two colored men, reported to have brandished a chisel in the motorist's face, were taken to Fourth precinct station, where they will be charged with attempted robbery.

John N. Bender, of the Fifth Engineers, Fort Belvoir, Va., the motorist, was hit once in the face before the cruiser arrived on the scene.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

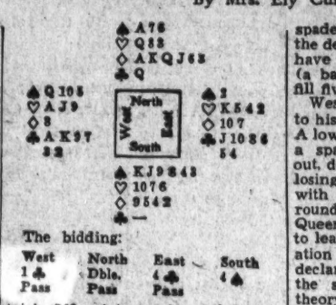
Half-Baked Analysis.

Most players past the novice stage are able to judge one suit and when to shift to another suit. But, when it comes to selecting the precise card to be played, their ideas are unfortunately sometimes foggy. Witness West's superficial analysis in today s hand.

West, dealer.

Esat-West vulnerable.

West correctly read his partner's pre-emptive club bid as proof of weakness outside of the club suit itself and, since he could not gauge his losing tricks at a five club contract, wisely decided not to battle the non-vulnerable opponents. East had the same problem when four spades came around to him. He was afraid a five club bid might result in a two-trick, 500-point, penalty and, hence, desisted. Considering that the four spade contract should have been set, the decision was wise, since it would have required double-dummy play (a backward heart finesse) to fulfill five clubs.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dble.	4 ♣	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the club King and, to his horror, saw the declarer ruff. A low spade was led to the Ace, and a spade returned. East showing out, declarer saw he could not avoid losing to the Queen, so he went up with the King and played a third round. West, on lead with the Queen, had no problem of what suit to lead. Obviously, a club continuation was out of the question since declarer would ruff and rattle off the solid diamond suit. On the theory (as he explained later) that the one chance to defeat four spades was to find East with both the King and ten of hearts, West cashed the heart Ace and then sent the Jack through dummy's Queen. East, alas, had the King without the ten and the defenders could take only two heart tricks, and the spade already home.

West's "theory" had been only half correct. Unless East had the heart King, all was lost, of course. But why did he need the ten? West himself had a combination that in this case was fully the equivalent of the A-J-10. Since West realized that there was no hope unless East held the heart King, he should also have realized that his proper play was not the Ace of hearts but the Jack. This play would be declarer's undoing.

Obstacles To Trade Pacts.

Nobody is better qualified to discuss the difficulties of making trade agreements than Dr. Henry F. Grady, now a member of the Tariff Commission, but formerly chief of the Trade Agreements Division of the State Department.

In an address before the National Foreign Trade Convention Dr. Grady pointed out that political considerations, concepts and ideologies in a number of countries are predominant in the determination of international economic policies. Economic considerations, in his opinion, play a less and less important part in maintenance of trade and exchange controls and clearing and compensation agreements based on them.

So long as that is the case, an improvement in economic conditions alone offers no assurance that restrictive trade control systems will be abandoned in favor of policies that encourage expansion. As a matter of fact, with trade improving, Dr. Grady notes that the number of clearing and compensation agreements jumped from 131 in 1936 to 220 this year while the number of countries involved rose from 34 to 46.

These agreements, which tend to become systems of bilateral balancing, naturally interfere seriously with efforts to secure most-favored-nation treatment for the United States under the reciprocal trade pacts. Dr. Grady frankly admits that where quotas and exchange control are established, all that you can get is something approaching full most-favored-nation treatment. Where controls established for financial reasons are retained because they are believed to be a means of increasing national self-sufficiency the Hull program can obviously make little headway.

Dr. Grady's assertion that the world is "groping back to normal international trade and currency function" receives no confirmation from the facts which he cites. There is, however, as he says, a growing restiveness with the existing system that is a hopeful augury for the future.

The Hull program at least points the way to a desirable kind of international co-operation as opposed to autarchy. It looks toward peace and discourages aggression. How far it can make headway in a world in which political thinking hostile to these objectives has gained such ground is problematical. One can only agree with Dr. Grady that "when the concept of aggression and conflict is removed the way is clear for economic and military disarmament alike."

In Need Of A Power Policy.

In commenting on the rate formula worked out for the Bonneville power dam last week, J. D. Ross, administrator of that project, said: "We ought to be businesslike about this thing and pay Uncle Sam back the money he puts up." On that point there is general agreement. But whether the Government is actually following a "businesslike" policy in regard to power production is an entirely different question.

The utilities insist that an enormous program of construction in the power industry is being held back because of "subsidized competition and strangulation." So far as the delay in expanding facilities is concerned, their statement appears to be substantiated by the assertion of Frank R. McNinch, former chairman of the Federal Power Commission, that the industry will require $7,500,000,000 in new capital during the next five years.

If the Administration is thinking in businesslike terms about the power industry, it can scarcely ignore appeals for a policy that will permit normal development to go forward. The continued lag in utility construction, despite the record-breaking consumption of electricity in 1935 and 1936, has become especially notable because of the present recession in industrial activity.

The utility executives' claim that "a vast untapped reservoir of jobs, outrivaling the programs of PWA and WPA, awaits release" may be exaggerated. Moreover, there are reasons to believe that this lag is related, to some extent, to the abuses which grew up in the power industry in the heyday of speculation. But that is not the entire picture. The uncertain policy of the Administration appears to be a major factor in the failure of the power industry to show any response to recovery stimuli.

Any reasonable move which the Administration makes to protect the interests of the consuming public and potential investors in power company securities may be properly applauded. But the mistakes of the past are no excuse for permanently penalizing an entire industry. Certainly it is time for the Administration to adopt a policy that will permit electric utility companies to go ahead with legitimate plans for development.

If the President's objective is Government ownership of the country's power facilities, he should ask Congress to write that policy into law. If he merely wishes to set up "yardsticks" to measure the reasonableness of private power rates, such a formula should be devised in all fairness to the private companies supplying the country with most of its electricity.

As pointed out by Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA, in a recent magazine article, "there should be no hidden subsidies, no undisclosed Government assistance to local public power systems." "Having invited the investment of private capital to supply the public with electric power," he contends, "the public is under obligation to respect actual honest and useful investment, and not to jeopardize or destroy it by capricious and arbitrary coercion."

In no event is there excuse for pursuit of an uncertain and haphazard policy that leaves the sword of Damocles suspended uncertainly over the head of an important industry.

Congress' Memory Is Short.

A determined fight against compulsory regulation of agriculture has opened on Capitol Hill. Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee and some of his colleagues have taken a positive stand against rigid quotas and penalizing taxes. Yet the entire debate is proceeding in an unrealistic atmosphere. Both Senate and House committees appear to take it for granted that Congress has authority to set up any compulsory devices which a majority may approve.

Mr. Jones' preference for "a voluntary farm program as to most commodities" is based on economic considerations. He fears, and with good reason, that compulsory restrictions may encourage "foreign competition and domestic substitution." The old Bankhead act fixing cotton marketing quotas demonstrated that fact. There are plenty of sound economic reasons for opposition to enforced crop curtailment.

The surprising thing is that other objections to the compulsory principle are being so generally soft-pedaled. Even Mr. Jones is apparently willing to waive objections to mandatory control in the case of tobacco. The constitutional weakness which brought the original AAA to grief seems to have been entirely lost to sight. The House and Senate committees appear to be going ahead as if the Constitution had been amended so as to permit rigid Federal control over the Nation's farms.

Presumably this attitude grows out of a belief that the decision invalidating the AAA would be overturned if the court, as now constituted, should be asked to pass upon substantially the same issues. It is true that the opinion in the Hoosac Mills case was rendered by a majority of 6 to 3. Since Justice Black has taken the place of Justice Van Devanter and there seems to have been some shifting of views in recent court decisions, some legislators lightly assume that constitutional difficulties have been overcome. But that belief is likely to prove superficial.

The court held, in effect, that Congress has no authority to regulate agricultural production. And that position was not directly challenged by the dissenting justices. They regarded benefit payments to farmers for the reduction of crops merely as "conditional gifts of money." It was almost solely upon this argument that they departed from the reasoning of the court. What will the minority opinion be worth, then, if Congress writes compulsory restrictions into the new law?

In his dissenting opinion Justice Stone laid great stress upon his point that the AAA did "not command or coerce" farmers to abide by its regulations. Then appears this significant statement:

> The power to tax and spend is not without constitutional restraints. One restriction is that the purpose must be truly national. Another is that it may not be used to coerce action left to State control.

Since Justices Brandeis and Cardozo joined in this dissenting opinion, it appears that the advocates of compulsory regulation of crops are flying in the face of the minority of the Supreme Court as well as the majority. They are solemnly considering enactment of far-reaching agricultural controls without so much as a dissenting opinion to serve as a constitutional peg.

It is precisely this irresponsible attitude which led the New Deal into a morass of unconstitutional legislation a few years ago. Other blunders of the recovery period would shrink to insignificance, however, if Congress should now rush deeper into the same bog when there is no acute emergency to excuse such heedless action.

The Itch For Politics.

In few countries is there, any longer, a certain road to political eminence. Neither ancestry nor education count very much and wealth, more often than not, is a definite handicap. The battle is to the strong when it is not to the wily, the persistent or the vociferous. And men of every class, background and station are finding their way to the top.

That is true in Yugoslavia as elsewhere. But it also seems clear that the sine qua non of a political career in that young and progressive nation is to have a name ending in "itch." Without it a would-be politician is simply left at scratch. With it, you go places.

For proof there is the recent cabinet reconstruction at Belgrade, winding up with the following: Stoyadinovitch (premier); Stoshovitch (public works); Madarasevitch (education); Kalunyitch (forests and mines); Miletitch (physical training); Chverkitch (pests and telegraphs); Novakovitch (without portfolio).

If there is anything in a name, a hopeful ministerial unity is strongly indicated.

Hitler's Offer To Mediate.

At a moment when Germany is pressing Italy to join the Third Reich and Japan in a triangular agreement, a move which the Nanking government can hardly view with other than profound suspicion, Hitler has indicated his willingness to play the role of "honest broker" between the Far Eastern combatants.

To Japan such an offer of mediation clearly has more to recommend it than would a similar offer by the Brussels conference, dominated as that conference is by powers justifiably critical of Japan's actions on the mainland of Asia. Were it not for Germany and Italy, Japan would today find itself in a position of fairly complete diplomatic isolation. The Third Reich has demonstrated its friendliness toward the island empire by refusing to participate in the Brussels parley and by its sympathetic attitude toward Japan's policies.

This does not necessarily mean that Japan will accept Hitler's mediation offer. The Tokyo government has thus far insisted that peace between Japan and China can be achieved only through direct negotiations of those two powers. It may continue to hold that view unless assured in advance that German mediation would secure for it all or a large part of those gains it hopes to achieve through military action. But, clearly, insofar as Hitler is prepared to give any such assurances to Tokyo his acceptability as a mediator disappears.

It is doubtful, therefore, whether Hitler's ambitious trial balloon will get very far. It is nonetheless significant that this trial balloon has been floated. Coming as it does immediately after the opening of the Brussels parley, it creates the suspicion that in Berlin, at least, the futility of that conference is by no means taken for granted.

If the powers represented at Brussels are at the moment floundering around in a sea of indecision and uncertainty, there is no assurance this will continue to be the case indefinitely. There is a possibility, slight as it may be at the moment, of some program of joint action by the Nine-Power Treaty signatories or the more powerful among them. And that possibility Germany, no less than Japan, cannot help viewing with alarm. Nor can Germany entirely discount the possibility of the creation at Brussels of something like a bloc of democratic powers.

Not unnaturally, Hitler has leaped into the breach with a plan which, could it be successful, would spike all these dangerous possibilities. Effective mediation by Germany in the Sino-Japanese dispute would be a boon both to the Fuehrer and the Third Reich. It would mean a great increase in prestige. By restoring peace in China it would release Japan's energies for a possible assault on Russia. It would save Germany's not inconsiderable trade stake in China. And last, but not least, successful German mediation would demolish the Brussels conference and thus be another blow at the idea of collective action for peace which Germany scorns but which, nonetheless, it fears.

The Great Books.

Speaking in New York, the Secretary of Agriculture is reported to have declared that the young people of the next generation will not read such authors as Adam Smith, Darwin and Marx. Humanity, he holds, is outgrowing its enthusiasm for uncoordinated analytical science and abstract economics. Accordingly, he concludes that the next generation of students will concentrate on books not yet written—books which will epitomize the products of the world's present painful soul-searchings.

These arresting thoughts are of particular interest in these parts. For the leaders of nearby St. John's College have done considerable thinking along similar lines. And their conclusions, which have been generally publicized, are almost diametrically opposed to those advanced by Mr. Wallace. St. John's believes that the classics provide the only feasible means of recapturing the liberal tradition on which hangs the fate of the Occident. Thus the college has compiled a list of the world's monumental books to form the basis for its undergraduate curriculum. Beginning with Homer, the list runs the gamut of "greats" down to and including Veblen.

Are the two views incompatible? It does not seem so. St. John's, partly because it was founded in 1696 but mostly because education implies recapitulation, looks backward to the best works which man's search for knowledge has produced. Secretary Wallace, because he is on the firing line of the current war against insecurity and confusion, looks forward. Without colleges to have schooled him in the fundamentals of modern thought, Mr. Wallace could scarcely be fighting his fight today. And as for St. John's, it may be assumed that its directors will add to the list of books on which its students browse any truly great volume resulting from the present upheaval in our thinking.

One Considerate Driver.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last evening near my home at the Ontario Apartments something so fine happened to me that I wish to share it with your readers.

I am just recovering from the effects of a broken ankle caused by an automobile striking me two months ago and now, when attempting to cross the street, fear grips me so terribly I can hardly proceed. While waiting to cross, a young man seeing my predicament stopped his car, got out and assisted me across the street. I was so overcome with gratitude I could do nothing but express my thanks.

I trust the young man happens to read this so that he will know just how I felt, and to anyone who sometimes feels as though no driver cares. I would say there are kind drivers. To all of them we, who are crippled extend our heartfelt thanks for any consideration shown us. And to those who do not seem to care—well, we hope they will never have any cause to regret their reckless driving. GRATEFUL.

Washington, Nov. 3.

Seconds Mr. Reynolds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with the sentiments expressed by Mr. E. S. Reynolds in his letter dated October 27, and the number who agree with him is growing by leaps and bounds. It's about time the people who lost their minds in 1932—and since—awake to the fact that five years of the worst misrule this country has ever had are too much for even a rich country like ours.

Not long ago some one in a letter to your paper quoted Mr. Wilson as saying the Republicans had not had an idea for 50 years. Maybe so! But to make his story a good one he should have enumerated the ideas Wilson had, among them the one about keeping us out of war, which was good, if it had worked. That was some idea! He also should have mentioned the ideas of this Administration—the one about spending our way to prosperity. What prosperity?

JOHN I. NAYLER.

Washington, Nov. 4.

Dr. Smith's Dismissal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post states that the "Board of Public Welfare" has dismissed Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

I am not only surprised, but much pained by this action on the part of the board, and as a teacher in the school, I feel that this dismissal is most unjust.

Dr. Smith has transformed the training school from a prison into a home. The girls have had a mother's care, and such care was sadly needed. She has shown rare judgment in her treatment of the many problems which were brought to her by the girls every day. Always patient and sympathetic, and above all else she has a great love for justice. Her co-workers loved and trusted her.

Being a philanthropic volunteer teacher, I have no "axe to grind" in making this appeal to the fair-minded citizens of the District.

Another Cure.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your Post Impressionist column, "The Miracle House," reminds me of a cure quite miraculous in itself as therein told, though not by such miraculous means.

An oldish lady of my acquaintance here had been bed-ridden for years, an object of constant care and solicitude of her family. One day their house took fire. She not only sprang from her bed but threw the bed clothes and many other articles out of the window and from then on while I knew them was the most lively and energetic of the family.

Stock Market 'Victims.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have been told on good authority, and it is undoubtedly true, that the present business recession and stock market decline are due to the half-baked economic theories of the Administration. But it isn't true that the average investor—and by "average investor" I mean the man with an income of less than $15,000 a year—who has taken severe losses during the past three months, is a "helpless victim." On the contrary, he is a willing and incredibly stupid victim.

A friend of mine is a case in point. He has a salary of $10,000 a year, a wife and two children, a $5,000 term life insurance policy, owns his own home and has about $9,000 invested in the stock market. He lost his shirt in the market in '29, and his hair turned gray last month for fear he was going to lose it again. Last spring his stocks were worth quite a bit more than the $9,000 he had put into them and he was riding high. Today they're worth a lot less than he put in and he's in the depths. Those stocks are his bid for financial security. They must take care of his family if he dies. They must provide a retirement income for him when he retires. How much will they be worth when he dies? He doesn't know. How much when he retires? He doesn't know that either. He can only hope that before either of those events takes place he will have been able to add to his stock holdings and that those holdings will be worth at least as much as he has put into them. But the record of the past ten years doesn't offer much justification for such a hope.

My own business career has pretty much paralleled his. We both went into business in the early twenties. I am earning $1,500 a year less than he is and consequently I save a little less than he does. I have never inherited a penny, and yet, today, I'm worth considerably more than he is.

About the time he started to put his savings into stocks I started investing mine in life insurance. Today I have five $10,000 policies—a $50,000 fool-proof investment. It hasn't cost me $50,000 nor anything like it. It never will cost me $50,000. It is my bid for security. If I die tomorrow, my family gets $50,000. His gets the $5,000 in life insurance plus whatever his $9,000 stock investment happens to be worth—about $6,000, as the market stands today. Should I be killed accidentally tomorrow, my family would have $100,000, since all my policies provide for double indemnity in such a case.

The man with an income in the brackets below $15,000 who trades the security of life insurance investment for the uncontrollable uncertainties of stock market investment is incredibly stupid. He is not a "helpless victim." He is a deliberate victim. S. K. WILEY.

From A Howard Alumna.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, too, wish to express my thanks and appreciation for your editorial of October 25 entitled "Two Howard Alumni Charges," and also for your answer to Edward P. Lovett's letter under date of October 29.

I state for your information the following: At the last annual meeting of this so-called General Alumni Association, held June 10, 1937, they had only 253 members officially listed out of the 10,000 graduates of the university. These 253 members were represented by 29 delegates, as follows: New York, 7; New Jersey, 6; North Carolina, 1, and the District of Columbia, 15. The majority of the delegates from the three States mentioned above were by proxy.

Of the 20 names listed on the stationery of this association as composing the officers and executive committee 14 are from the District of Columbia. This is the board which, with autocratic powers, has submitted to the trustees of Howard University a set of resolutions expressing their wishes and desires and not those of the alumni of Howard University.

Give this group the positions and salaries they wish and the trouble at Howard University will be over.

The Street Car Fare Increase.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Assuming the Capital Transit Co. is entitled to the increase of fare granted it by the Public Utilities Commission for the District of Columbia, yet, there appears to have been an utter disregard of and lack of consideration for the President's "Forgotten Man" in denying to him the just and equitable right of buying three tokens (rides) for 25 cents.

There are many thousands of men, women and children in and near Washington who are striving to eke out an existence and, in so doing, are forced to use street cars and buses daily. The saving of a nickel on three rides means much to the patrons of the transit company. The sale of three tokens for 25 cents adds no additional burden or expense upon the transit company. In fact, the conductor or motorman can hand out three tokens, with greater facility than he can six of them. To deny the rider who fortunately may have 50 cents the just and equitable right to purchase three tokens for a quarter and use the rest for his lunch, or to compel the man with only a quarter in his pocket to pay a 10-cent straight fare twice a day and to use the nickel for shoe leather, used because of the ride he did not get, seems unfair.

When the man who drops his thin dime in the fare box and finally gets "sardined" into the corner and up against the brake rigging of the half-century old juggernaut street cars, there is a prayer on his lips that he may get two more dimes for the next day's journeys which he has to pass on to purchase limousines for those who would take away his shoes and make him go hungry.

In other words, the Public Utilities Commission, supposedly able to see eye-to-eye with human suffering, and the financiers of the Capital Transit Co. know full well that in this game (New Deal or what-not) there is a "joker" up somebody's sleeve. They mean to force upon the greatest number who are least able to pay, a 10-cent straight fare. Certainly, this increase will not adversely affect limousine riders.

CLAUDE A. THOMPSON.

Washington, Nov. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If those indignant groups that are bitterly condemning the local traction company for increasing fares would resort to reason, instead of emotion, they would doubtless realize they are seeing only a small side of a very large picture. Not a thought are they apparently giving to the poor, forgotten and impoverished stockholders of the company in question (I am not one) who are receiving absolutely nothing on their investment.

This is due to the fact that the earnings of this company and a million in borrowed money have gone to purchase new cars, buses, equipment, etc., not to mention increased wages on two occasions. In order to "carry on" or function with a degree of satisfaction, it was necessary to increase fares, irrespective of shareholders.

Those local news sheets which persist in "playing up" to their readers, by condemning the increase in question, should, in justice to the people, present all sides of the question.

Washington, Nov. 4.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In regard to the action of the Public Utilities Commission in granting the Capital Transit Co. its third increase in street car fare, may I remind the honorable gentlemen on the commission about serving two masters honest and faithfully. Their past and present action would seem to show they are serving the Capital Transit Co. instead of Washington citizens, whom they are supposed to serve and protect.

The Post Impressionist

A March Master.

SOME men are conient to lead uncharted, uncalculated lives; others early decide that their book of life shall have many glorious, significant episodes, and that the final chapter, reviewed, shall represent a career productive to themselves and useful to others.

Essentially, this was the aim of John Philip Sousa, whose anniversary of birth is today a cherished recollection of an appreciative public. Eighty-three years ago this bandmaster-composer-to-be saw the light of day in the National Capital.

At an early age he showed an aptitude for music and, at a local conservatory, received his primary instruction on the violin. With the completion of his third year of musical training he won all five medals offered by the school.

When he reached his thirteenth year he was offered a position in a circus band, but his father, who foresaw in his son, John Philip, a musician of futurity, decided that, instead, he should enlist in the United States Marine Band. His "course" with this organization lasted five years. He then returned to his first love, the violin.

While yet in his youth he led an orchestra at a Washington variety house and played the violin also in a local opera-house group. Twelve years in an atmosphere of music worked wonders, and created in him an urge to step out as a composer. His early compositions reflected a form which later brought him international distinction.

In the summer of 1876 Sousa played at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. With whatever type of association he connected the muse of music dominated and he composed. While with a Philadelphia church choir he wrote his first comic opera, and while acting as its drill master found among its membership his bride-to-be.

For more than a decade he was leader of the United States Marine Band. It is singular that at the age of 34 he should return in conductorship to a service which the age of 13 claimed him as a recruit. A commentator of that period said: "He reorganized the band with vigor and vision and breathed the breath of life into a somnolent group."

Sousa was one of few men to have the distinction of serving in three branches of the military service: As musical director of the Sixth Army Corps during the Spanish-American War; as conductor of the United States Marine Band and as lieutenant in charge of many bands during the World War.

• • • •

While conductor of the band he wrote a variety of works, including the famous "Washington Post March." More than 100 marches, unmistakably Sousan, were credited to his genius. From the well-known "Stars and Stripes Forever," it is reported, he made about $300,000. He became to the march what Johann Strauss, the Viennese, was to the waltz.

The "Washington Post March" was composed in 1889, dedicated to The Post, and received its public introduction in June, 1890. Its popularity was instantaneous, according to a record of the period. It caught the fancy of the American populace, and was subsequently whistled in the streets of London; played in Vienna, Paris and Berlin. In 1895 the Empress of China ordered the introduction of an orchestrion into her palace so that the march might be played with many repetitions.

With the aid of private capital Sousa organized his own band and on September 26, 1892, gave an initial concert at Plainfield, N. J. Engagements followed for many important expositions, including the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893. He and his band toured the United States; visited Europe four times; and in 1910-12 made one trip around the world. He also toured the country with the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band and drew millions of dollars into the Federal Treasury on Liberty Loan drives.

Instances there are in history where types of talent have been prolific and while output has mounted with the years, surveys prove that, by contrast, one creation outstands. It seems to represent the best effort of the composer; to be, in fact, the soul of his genius.

If popularity is to be accepted as a criterion, and if the time test is to govern, 48 years of recollective, world-wide band playing should easily decide any vote for merit. The "Washington Post March" is part of the repertoire of every military band and, after the lapse of nearly a half century, has not ceased to be a favorite with all the nations of the earth—a fitting tribute to the genius of the "March King" and an enviable heritage to bequeath to every lover of sprightly, spirited, vivacious music.

Save The Constitution!

The citizenship committee of the American Bar Association regrets that its invitation to teachers' colleges to participate in an essay contest on the Constitution is not receiving a widespread response. Rather than regret the indifference, the committee should rejoice.

The Constitution is in danger of being essayed and orated to death under the sponsorship of its friends. If college students are at last hesitating to participate it may be a healthful sign that their interest in its origins and principles is considerably deeper than the trite sentiment and grandiose phrases necessary to win a contest on its virtues.

Income Tax Possibilities.

ROSWELL MAGILL, Undersecretary of the Treasury and an expert on clever little schemes having the color of legality, recently bestowed a mother-in-law's kiss on the proposal to abolish the parasitic exemptions now enjoyed by some 4,000,000 public officials and employes and the owners of billions in public bonds.

Mr. Magill went through the motions of embracing the idea, but with such a face that he might as well have kicked it in the pants. He said the Federal return from the tax on the billions in salaries now exempt would be less than $15,000,000, though that trifle of money was hardly worth the bother of collecting—an attitude which doesn't jibe with the experience of those who not only do pay the tax on much smaller incomes but often have to spend a day haggling with the Treasury catch-polls over a matter of $4.80.

• • • •

THE APPARATUS for collecting this tax from the great overprivileged horde of exempt judges, mayors, governors, commissioners and all is already in existence, and the $15,000,000 which he mentioned in a strangely condescending tone would be gravy enough to take care of a large number of political scrapbook keepers and Presidential generosities to individuals.

Mr. Magill also emphasized the difficulty of obtaining a constitutional amendment, as the Treasury would prefer, rather than a legislative enactment which might be slapped down by the Supreme Court, in proceeding against the tax-exempt bonds.

The objection to this approach is that it doesn't attack the problem but takes an awestruck look at its muscle and concedes that it is too tough. And thus, although the tax amendment says Congress may levy taxes on incomes from whatever source derived, a large proportion of the total of employed persons in the country get their civilization at a discount, and a man with a million dollars in these bonds, or ten of twenty millions, is excused from the obligation that burdens a man drawing $25 a week, if single.

Moreover, there are other great incomes from other sources derived which the Treasury appears to regard with fear. These are the revenues of religious, charitable and educational organizations and of labor unions.

The present revenue act distinctly says that if a religious, charitable or educational institution shall engage in propaganda or otherwise attempt to influence legislation its income shall be subject to the tax, but, although there are flagrant and very attractive cases, the Treasury is not interested. Mention the handsome possibilities of this unexpected field of income taxation to anyone in the Treasury or the Internal Revenue and the pictures fall off the walls, women faint and strong men weep. For, although the amendment is plain and the money is there, the political risks take a kind of courage that isn't in the Treasury or Congress, and the law will continue to be enforced by ear.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS have held that an organization in these classes may engage in private retail business, sell merchandise or run hotels for profit or rent valuable tax-exempt lands in competition with the taxpayers and needn't even report the income, much less pay a tax on it. It would take only an act of Congress to destroy that interpretation, and no constitutional question would be involved, but there has been and will be no action for reasons which are obvious though not honest.

It is a curious idea, too, which holds that people in certain low brackets and too hard pressed for eating money and rent to be required to pay income taxes to the Government may nevertheless be compelled to pay a similar tax to a labor union, but that the union itself needn't bother to pay.

When the small fry default their Federal income taxes they are merely required to come in and talk it over, and usually get away with a lecture and possibly a penalty of a couple of dollars. But a labor union may extort as much as a thousand dollars, on the line, for a license to work, plus annual dues and special assessments, plus an income tax of 3 per cent of the gross. And in case of default the union suspends the member's right to earn a living.

The Treasury is too fond of its reasons not to collect taxes from sources which might cause political headaches.

To Stop Japan

Observer Argues For Agreement Among Western Powers at Brussels to Apply Economic Pressure on Warring Tokyo.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE FIRST OBJECTIVE of the Brussels Conference is mediation between Japan and China. Formal mediation would seem ruled out by the former's refusal to attend the conference, but the same results might be obtained through diplomatic channels if the will to peace existed in Tokyo and Nanking.

The will to peace, however, is just what is lacking in both capitals. Nanking is prepared to continue its bitter defense rather than accept unfavorable terms, in the hope of wearing down the war power of Japan, while Tokyo, after so much scheming and sacrifice of blood and treasure, is obviously not inclined to forego the gains its army has won in North China and Shanghai.

We must expect, accordingly, that mediation is likely to prove abortive and with it all hope for an armistice in China. The conference will then be faced with two alternatives. It must either undertake effective action to prevent Japan from consolidating the fruits of her aggression, or content itself with indorsing once more the judgment most of its members have already passed.

Effective action, presumably through the threat or use of concerted economic measures, appears unlikely at the moment, but may only be just around the corner. With every day that passes, Japan's activities in China tend to stiffen the attitude of the larger conference powers; her intransigeance toward their efforts at Brussels can only develop this process further. The possibility that such action may be seriously considered in the relatively near future raises again an issue which the peace-minded nations have had to face before. Does concerted economic pressure on a great power mean real danger of war?

Europe Has Paid Price Of Cringing Before Duce.

MUSSOLINI shouted loudly that it did when the members of the League enforced partial sanctions against Italy. He succeeded thereby in dissuading them from curtailing the supplies of oil so necessary to his trucks and his bombing planes. Threats alone proved sufficient, and Europe since, and Asia lately, have paid the price.

The present ominous state of Europe, caused by the war threat of the Berlin-Rome axis, Italian intervention in Spain and Italian "activities" in the Mediterranean, can only be attributed to the failure of the League powers to meet these threats. And the decision of the Japanese army to pursue its designs on China now were largely influenced by the outcome in Ethiopia and the consequent menace to the British empire in Europe.

This issue must be faced eventually by the nations which desire peace. Every time an aggressor attacks, he will warn the rest of the world that effective opposition by economic measures means war. Each time he is successful, the path to military conquest will be blazed the wider, the warlike nations strengthened, and the peaceful nations weakened. We must remember, furthermore, that three-fourths of the peoples of the world live in the vast continent of Eurasia and that the belligerent powers at both ends of this continent have begun to correlate their policies. Bombs and shells at one end now shake the earth at the other.

It has been suggested by some observers that Japan would reply to concerted economic pressure by war, that, urged on by pride and hysteria, she would not hesitate to face the prospect of national harakiri by attacking all the Western powers with territories in the Pacific. Does this view appear valid?

Realism Forbids Idea Of Japan In General War.

ONE GROUND for this belief is the unsurpassed patriotism of the Japanese, who would undergo any sacrifices for their country. But surely the patriotic leaders of Japan, who serve the nation and not the personal ambitions and prestige of a frowning dictator, would place the national welfare before their own feelings or inclinations. No matter how bitter their feelings might become, it does not seem realistic to expect them to embrace a course which must destroy their country's primacy in Asia and the hard-won progress of the last 40 years.

Precedents, moreover, do not point in this direction. Japan has yielded again and again to foreign pressure rather than run the risk of a struggle against dangerous odds. She yielded to the joint pressure of Germany, Russia and France after her first victory over China, and to American and European insistence in connection with the Twenty-one Demands, the withdrawals from eastern Siberia and Shantung, and the Washington Conference. Her rulers have only adopted warlike policies when they have had reason to believe that war would pay national dividends.

We must also remember that the army and the navy are now the real rulers of Japan. Defeat in a war against a number of great Western nations would be very dangerous to their own special interests; it might well bring about internal changes which would end for all time their historic dominance in Japanese life. Capitulation before economic pressure would represent a far less dangerous alternative for them, since it would not strike directly at their military prestige.

Common sense and precedents indicate, accordingly, that there is little reason to fear that Japan would reply to concerted economic pressure by war. Nevertheless, it is wise to envisage the blackest eventualities, however remote they seem. Would a Japanese attack on the Western powers today necessitate a dangerous and costly Pacific campaign?

Such an assault would automatically isolate Japan from more than half of her overseas market and her principal sources of supply. It would also permit the Western navies, without venturing near Japanese waters or bases, to institute a long-range blockade of her commerce with the American continents and all countries west of Singapore. Japan could only enjoy uninterrupted communication with China, a market she has already disrupted by aggression.

Isolation Alone Would Suffice To Humble Tokyo.

IF THERE IS reason to believe that economic pressure alone might be sufficient to halt Japan, it seems obvious that economic isolation and blockade of such far-reaching scope would force her to crack at an early date. She is more dependent than any other great power on foreign trade, and her "home front" is weakened already by years of financial strain and the drain of operations in China on her resources. It seems evident that the Western powers, if attacked, could achieve a decisive victory without attempting any dangerous naval campaign in the western Pacific.

It is true that Japan might attempt to seize the Pacific holdings of the Western powers, such as Hongkong, the East Indies or the Philippines. Even then, however, there would be no necessity to protect these territories by the dispatch of battleships across the Pacific. The inevitable collapse of her "home front" would in the end compel Japan to relinquish any Western possessions she had succeeded in occupying.

We may conclude then that concerted economic action against Japan is most unlikely to prove actively dangerous. How about the alternative course of doing nothing and allowing the time when Japan might be halted by measures other than war to pass forever?

This course points to very real danger for the Western world in two regions—Eurasia and the Pacific. Each Japanese triumph in the Far East will necessarily create a new "fighting frontier" with China, where clashes will tend to provoke another war like the two we have witnessed in a brief six-year period.

Japan, moreover, has now established herself on the border of Russia, in Manchuria and Mongolia, and her "continental policy" calls for a subsequent attempt to drive Russia back to Lake Baikal. If she succeeds, a new "fighting frontier" will stretch across Siberia, providing a cause for recurrent wars as far ahead as we can see.

With Asia destined thus for decades of instability, we must expect aggressive European governments to profit therefrom as Berlin and Rome are doing today, and so destroy all prospect for a stable peace in Europe. The outlook is not a pleasant one for Eurasia, pointing directly toward another world war.

Under such conditions, British power in the Pacific must be permanently weakened, leaving only two nations, Greater Japan and the United States, able to exert their full strength in that area. History since the days of Rome and Carthage teaches that such a situation usually ends in a desperate duel for supremacy.

Phony Rabbits

By Barnet Nover

It's The Scent That Counts.

SPORTS PROMOTERS long ago discovered that to get greyhounds to run you do not need live quarries. A mechanical rabbit made of wood and daubed with the scent which the greyhounds identify as that of the live animal is enough to put them through their paces.

The Fascist dictators have discovered that the same technique works in diplomacy. Again and again their offers of peace as well as their threats of war have had about the same relation to reality as the mechanical rabbits of the greyhound races have to real rabbits.

But this has not prevented the democracies from leaping to the bait. They have rejoiced whenever Hitler or Mussolini has garbed himself in olive branches. They have shivered in their boots whenever the dictators have clanked their swords. And though this has been going on for some years, they do so still.

• • • •

THE RESULT has been that the totalitarian states have managed to win a great many diplomatic victories at extremely little cost. And unless democratic nations and people get over their greyhound mentality, more of such victories will be won with results too fearful for anyone to contemplate who believes in peace and a decent international life.

The Berlin-Rome axis has been for Hitler and Mussolini an extremely profitable mechanical rabbit. Because of it they have made Great Britain and France run the way they wanted them to. And now they are about to let loose a new wooden bunny—the German-Italian-Japanese treaty against communism.

The combination is outwardly very impressive, Germany, Italy, Japan are, in the idiotic vocabulary of the moment, "have-not" nations, although Italy's imperial domain, including Ethiopia, is not inconsiderable and Japan has since 1895 swallowed Formosa, Korea, Manchuria, Inner Mongolia, a large part of North China and hundreds of Pacific islands that once belonged to Germany.

All three are intensely militaristic powers. All three have an undisguised contempt for peace as an ideal. All three have a very cynical attitude toward treaty obligations that stand in the way of their ambitions. And all three are enormously ambitious.

• • • •

ACTUALLY, however, the combination is far less impressive than it seems.

There is, in the first place, anything but perfect harmony between the members. The interest of Germany and Italy in Japan's success in China is negative, at best. Both of the Fascist powers have sought with might and main to extend their trade with China. The very fact that they did so is proof that they regarded the China market as valuable. And if that was true in the past it is not less true now for neither Germany nor Italy is making any spectacular progress in solving its grave economic problems.

To be sure, political considerations may and no doubt do outweigh economic considerations in the calculations of the Berlin and Rome governments, regarding the Far Eastern situation.

A setback for Japan, if such a setback is brought about through collective action at Brussels or elsewhere, would be a setback for them since it would set a precedent that could easily be applied to Europe, the Mediterranean and elsewhere.

But, on the other hand, there is little likelihood that so far as most European problems are concerned, Japan is or will be in the near future in any position to reciprocate the support given her in the Far East by Germany and Italy.

• • • •

THE MOST DANGEROUS possibility of the German-Italian-Japanese combination and the one which is being given the greatest measure of publicity is that the three powers might stage a simultaneous attack on their respective enemies. That is a German thrust in the direction of Czechoslovakia might be made to coincide with a Japanese attack on eastern Siberia. As isolated acts such aggressions would be dangerous and might be disastrous. Coinciding in their actions, the aggressors might succeed in getting away with their aggressions.

But it is difficult to see how German expansion to the south or east and Japanese expansion to the north would or could benefit Italy. Now, as ever, one of the certainties of the European balance of power is that the larger and more powerful the Third Reich becomes the relatively weaker becomes Italy.

It is, no doubt, the very limited measure of harmony that obtains between the two Fascist powers and Japan which explains why there is no talk of an alliance between them at this juncture. The impending agreement is solely directed against the Comintern. But such an agreement in itself is quite meaningless. The greatest boast of Hitler and Mussolini has been that they have eliminated bolshevism from their countries. And the men who rule Japan are hardly likely to ask for German and Italian assistance in rooting out communism in the island empire.

• • • •

WHAT THE THREE powers do hope to accomplish by such a tripartite accord is clearly to frighten the powerful democracies into inaction. By raising the specter of a triple alliance astride Europe and Asia they hope to succeed in bluffing the world into making concessions that would not otherwise be made to them. It is a game as transparent as the fact that the rabbit which the greyhounds chase in the sport arenas is not a real rabbit at all. But the democratic powers are so in the habit of following such fake bunnies that they may do so again.

The Genius

By William Lyon Phelps

Joseph Pulitzer.

"An Adventure With a Genius" is the title of a book by the accomplished writer and journalist Alleyne Ireland; it was published a few years ago and in 1937 it has been reissued in this attractive edition. It is published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

I am very glad that the publishers saw fit to get out a new edition of this work; for in some way I missed it when first issued, and I have enjoyed reading it immensely.

The genius—and he was a genius—is the late Joseph Pulitzer, owner and publisher of the New York World.

• • • •

He became totally blind, and along with that tragic deprivation he had a nervous breakdown so complete that any noise was intolerable; it would shatter him so that he could neither sleep nor work. His hearing, far from being dulled by advancing years, was amazingly sensitive; he could hear a whisper across the room.

Thus he lived a large part of the year on his yacht, which was built for that purpose; when he went to a hotel, he engaged rooms all around his own, etc.

His vigorous executive mind was accompanied in his disposition with prodigious intellectual curiosity and with an astounding memory. Thus he had always a group of secretaries who fed his eternally hungry mind during all his waking hours.

Mr. Alleyne Ireland saw an advertisement asking for still another secretary; he applied, was accepted after a terrific trial, or series of trials, and this book is the intimate history of his daily intimate association with Mr. Pulitzer, who was surely one of the most interesting of modern men. Remember his name is pronounced PULLitzer, not PEW.

One of the most admirable of his innumerable benefactions was his founding of the Pulitzer Prizes in literature, drama, journalism; they have had a civilizing effect on American culture.

More About Luray, Va.

MR. T. C. NORTHCOTT is the keyman at Luray, Va.

I went down there to take a look at the new carillon and Singing Tower. I discovered that Mr. Northcott was giving it to the town.

TOM McCARTHY.

I asked the local Chamber of Commerce for a little help in finding other points of interest. They, of course, pounced on the famed Caverns of Luray. Mr. Northcott owns them.

Then I learned that Luray was also distinguished as the site of the first air-conditioned home in history. Mr. Northcott lives in it.

And when it comes to the most interesting personality in the town . . . well, my vote goes to Mr. Northcott.

He's a spry old gentleman of 93 years. And three or four minutes after you meet him, you can understand the respect which he is accorded by his fellow townspeople.

• • • •

"CAME ALL the way from Washington, and want to interview me?" he said, "Why I don't understand it. But sit down and have a cigar."

Mr. Northcott, suffering a slight cold, was bundled up in bed when I went up with a photographer to interview him.

"Pictures?" he said. "Why I don't see what you want a picture of me for. This Singing Tower I'm giving to the town . . . that's just a little personal matter. But if you do want some pictures . . . well, I guess we have some around the house.

"What's that? You say the boss is expecting you to make a picture of me? You mean he might get 'het up' if you didn't get one? Well, if that's the way it is, I guess I can get up for a minute. Don't feel so bad, anyhow."

While Mr. Northcott is the key to some of the interesting things in Luray, Va., there are few things there more interesting than his own life. It has been keynoted by as much variety as his interests.

He fought on the Union side in the Civil War. Came through unscathed to teach school. Became a Congregational preacher and deserted the ministry nine years later because of criticism of his views by fellow ministers.

As he puts it, "I couldn't endure so much strife in a calling devoted to peace."

After that, he went into business and became a heating and ventilating engineer. It was probably that experience which led him to Luray, shortly after the turn of the century, with an idea for the construction of one of the strangest houses in the world. Today he lives in that house, which he built in 1901.

• • • •

IT'S A LARGE, pillared, Colonial dwelling. And to all appearances, it's nothing out of the ordinary. However, every minute you're inside, you're breathing the air of the Luray Caverns below.

Mr. Northcott had the idea that air, filtered through limestone, such as comprised the formation of the caverns, would be particularly healthful. It would be pure. And it would be definitely cool.

He sunk a shaft into the caverns and, using pipes and fans, he conditioned his house with cavern air. Provision was made to warm the air in winter. And, in summer, the cavern air's constant temperature of 54 degrees is to be welcomed.

For more than 35 years, Mr. Northcott has been breathing cavern air, as surely as if he had been living underground.

As for the caverns? Well, he became interested in them, after he'd rigged up the first air-conditioned house in history. He'd never tried his hand at advertising, but he figured he could master that just as easily as he had his other interests.

He felt that the caverns weren't being properly exploited. He took them over, and today more than 150,000 people pass through the winding passages every year.

Mr. Northcott is still very much the salesman for his caverns. And, though I hadn't intended to, I went through at his urging.

"Most beautiful caverns in the world," he said. And, though I haven't been through very many caverns, those at Luray are the most beautiful I've ever seen.

Without retracing your steps, you follow your guide along winding passageways, leading between the rows of massive columns and living stalactites. There's really no way of describing them except to say that, part of the time, the folded masses of limestone resemble a cozy corner of Inferno. And the rest of the time, as they glimmer under the lights, they look like something out of a Coleridge poem.

I asked the guide about the coloring of the interior of the cave. While red was the dominant color, it merged with whites, greens and blues.

"One of the most remarkable features of the cave," he told me. "Nine out of ten tourists ask, 'When was the last time you painted them?'

"But that," said the guide, "is the sorriest kind of libel. Those are the natural colorations of the walls."

The guide's chatter was informing—and mildly philosophic.

"We are now entering the grand ballroom," he said, as we approached a subterranean chamber, illuminated by indirect lighting. "This ballroom is a commentary on nature's mysteriousness. And on the peculiarities of the human race! Here, we have held five dances . . . and 38 weddings!"

Institute Poll Accuracy Shown In New York, Detroit Elections

LaGuardia's Actual Vote Predicted Within 4%, Reading's Within 2%; Scientific Method Used First Time in City Ballot.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 5.—Scientific sampling of public opinion had scored a new success today as the American Institute of Public Opinion compared its forecasts with the results of municipal elections in New York and Detroit.

The Institute predicted the Detroit outcome within 2 per cent and the New York result within 4 per cent.

In New York, the Institute said that Fiorello H. LaGuardia would defeat his Tammany opponent for Mayor, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, and eleventh-hour Institute figures gave LaGuardia 64 per cent of the total vote.

Next day, New York voters elected LaGuardia as predicted, giving him 60 per cent of the vote.

The result not only vindicated the Institute poll, but marked it as much more accurate than the widely advertised survey of the New York Daily News. The News predicted LaGuardia would receive 72 per cent of the vote—an overestimate of 12 per cent. The News forecast was based on a special poll of more than 50,000 voters.

The Institute did not conduct a special poll in New York, but made its test in the course of regular weekly polling operations which cover every State in the Union. Ballots assigned to New York City voters included a question on the mayoralty.

In Detroit, the Institute conducted a special poll in conjunction with the Detroit News.

Using its sampling method in a municipal election for the first time, the Institute distributed ballots to representative Detroit voters by personal interviewers.

On the basis of these interviews, the Institute reported that Richard W. Reading would poll 65 per cent of the vote and defeat his C. I. O.-indorsed rival, Patrick H. O'Brien.

When Detroit voters went to the polls Tuesday, they actually gave Reading 63 per cent of the vote. The poll indicated the winner in 20 out of Detroit's 22 wards.

Institute polls are made possible through the co-operation of leading American newspapers, including The Washington Post.

Corn Loans to Help Lower Meat Prices

By the Associated Press.

City dwellers who have been complaining about meat prices, Agricultural Department economists said yesterday, should cheer the Government's decision to make corn loans.

Farmers in the corn belt were forced to sell livestock in the last few years because droughts reduced the corn crop. The number of hogs and cattle fed for market recently has been far below average, raising meat prices.

With the corn-loan money, however, farmers can buy livestock, Federal economists said, and increase meat supplies.

Ice Makers to Hear Walker.

John R. Walker, executive vice president of the National Association of Sales and Finance Companies, will be a featured speaker at the twentieth annual convention of the National Association of Ice Industries in Cleveland November 9 to 12.

THE BOARD of Trustees of the Community Chest has voted that no agency may put on a special appeal in 1938 and remain a member of the Chest.

Legion Commander Calls on Roosevelt

National American Legion Commander Daniel Doherty, of Boston, made a "courtesy call" on President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday. He was accompanied by the Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, and an aide, Edward Seay.

Doherty and Woodring said the meeting had no special significance. Doherty said he would return to the Capital to participate in the Armistice Day celebration.

Doherty later conferred with Woodring and Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre. He discussed the reciprocal trade agreement policy with the latter.

Folger Head Given Shakespeare Cycle

A handsome bound and boxed set of the eight continuities used in the Shakespeare Cycle presented by the Columbia Broadcasting System this past summer were presented Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library, in his offices yesterday morning.

Harry C. Butcher, vice president of Columbia, made the presentation in behalf of William S. Paley, president of the system.

"This gift is in appreciation of the assistance given the Columbia Broadcasting System on the series of Shakespearean broadcasts this past summer," an accompanying letter explained.

Charles Robb To Quit Bench After 31 Years

Appellate Court Retirement November 15 to Leave 2 Vacancies.

After 31 years of service on the bench of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Associate Justice Charles H. Robb will retire on November 15.

The White House yesterday made public Justice Robb's letter of last Wednesday to President Roosevelt, advising him of his desire to step down from the court where he has sat since 1906, and the President's reply of acceptance.

The jurist will be 70 on November 14. His action leaves two vacancies to be filled, no successor having yet been appointed to the seat relinquished recently by Chief Justice George Ewing Martin.

Associate Justices D. Lawrence Groner, Harold M. Stephens and Justin Miller are comparative newcomers to the five-man appellate court. Chief Justice Martin had served since 1924 and the late Associate Justice Josiah Alexander Van Orsdel, who was succeeded by Mr. Miller, was appointed in 1907 by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Plans to Continue Work.

"I shall continue to work as before, but not as hard," Justice Robb said last night. "That is my only plan."

His letter to the President follows:

"I have the honor to advise you—

"On the fourteenth day of this month I will become 70 years of age and will have served continuously as an associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia for 31 years.

"I wish to avail myself of the rights, privileges and judicial duties specified in section 260, Judicial Code, as amended (title 28, section 375, United States Code), and to that end I will retire from regular active service on the bench on the 15th day of November, 1937.

"Very respectfully,

"CHARLES H. ROBB."

President's Reply.

The President replied:

"I acknowledge your letter of the 3d of November, notifying me of your retirement as an associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

"In accepting this retirement, permit me to say that your services upon the bench have been of the highest order and have accorded with the finest traditions of the judiciary.

"I extend to you my very best wishes for your health and happiness.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Justice Robb was born in Guilford, Vt., and was admitted to the bar of that State in 1892. His Federal service prior to appointment to the appellate court was as solicitor of the Postoffice Department during the investigation of 1903-04, and as an Assistant Attorney General from 1904 to 1906.

He and Mrs. Robb live at 1700 Hoban road northwest. They have one son, Roger Robb, who is an assistant United States attorney, and a daughter, Mrs. Elliott Billings, of Miami, Fla.

A Nimble Cast Scores Laughs In Arty Farce

'Live, Love and Learn' Clicks at Capitol; Heller on Stage.

"LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Marian Parsonnet, adapted to the screen by Charles Brackett, Cyril Hume and Richard Maibaum, starring Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, with Robert Benchley, Helen Vinson, Monty Woolley, E. E. Clive, Mickey Rooney, Charles Judels, Maude Eburne, Harlan Briggs, June Clayworth and Al Shean. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Hurrit. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Nonetheless, the comedy of "Live, Love and Learn" has more of a mental sparkle than an acrobatic leaning. There are many bright lines that grade above the mere wisecrack standard and its story of a young artist who sells out his talent to become a mere society pet has a certain consistency of motivation.

Robert Montgomery returns to his playboy role in this one, with a slight difference. He has no such opportunity for the sinister as was accorded him in "Night Must Fall," but he still manages to put a nasty chill into the part of the picture where the character of the young painter temporarily disintegrates under the strain of success and the cooing of society and he becomes considerable of a cad for the time being.

Garret vs. Park Avenue.

Love in a garret and love on Park avenue are contrasted in the celluloid manner, with all the honors going to poverty, while a modernistic duplex just seems to breed material unrest. There are many broad laughs in the picture, but the winner is undoubtedly that moment when inebriated Robert Benchley, his hand outstretched in formal greeting, falls flat on his face and into unconsciousness. Runners-up are the fight between sailors and marines over the merits of Montgomery's landscape and the mishandling of a prominent art dealer by Messrs. Montgomery and Benchley who are under the impression that the fellow is just a nosey reporter.

Rosalind Russell plays Bob's wife with considerable conviction and a great deal of skill, while Helen Vinson brings a sweet viperishness to the role of the would-be husband stealer.

Bob Benchley adorns the part of the alcoholic best friend. In fact, Montgomery and Benchley are most of the picture. Mickey Rooney, briefly seen as the landlady's son, is plenty good. Charles Judels, too, makes a standout of his short bit as the corner grocer. And, of all things, who appears as a gentle old art teacher but our old friend, Al Shean, of the famous Gallagher and Shean. A very nice job Mr. Shean makes of his role and he should be around the movies for quite a while.

A speech by Manhattan's own "Little Flower," Mayor LaGuardia, is the high spot of the Fox Movietone News. "Laughing at Fate," a short showing the feats of professional daredevils, also points the moral that sometimes the laugh must be on the wrong side of the face.

A "Swingy" Stage Show.

Adagio, tap and chorus dancing, singing in the sweet and comedy manners, harmonica playing and juggling—these are all included in the generous stage show.

Dancer Dolores, of the adagio group, is not only graceful but brings an almost sculptural value to some of her poses. Juggler Val Setz displays originality in the development of several stunts. Comedian Gil Lamb is assisted by a quite remarkable and unnamed harmonica player. Selma Marlowe tap dances in Spanish style and a red velvet cape.

Jackie Heller recommends and shepherds all this group, sings a few songs of his own and also bestows such fulsome compliments and "thank yous" on the audience that it would be hardhearted, indeed, not to respond with equally complimentary applause.

Trans-Lux

"The Littlest Diplomat," a Technicolor picture of unusual beauty, introduces Sybil Jason as the heroine at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. It is a dramatic feature of an outpost garrison of the British in the Far East, using the always popular plot that the diplomacy of a child overshadows man's brute force.

Shorty, the Chimpan: e, is at his best in "Cowboy Shorty." He truly accomplishes some remarkable bits of acting as he runs down and captures a gang of bandits in the cowboy country of the West, recovering the money and taking the desperadoes to justice.

The highlights in the news bring a variety that contains something for everyone's taste. Football for local fans covers a wide field. Great shots of the Maryland-Florida game at College Park, Md., are mingled with a professional game at the Polo Grounds, New York, between the N. Y. Giants and the Chicago Bears. Also Michigan State-Kansas, Fordham-North Carolina and Penn-Navy games are recorded.

War Admiral wins the Washington Handicap, with some thrilling scenes from this Laurel classic. To change the scene from sports, we see "Farmer" Roosevelt cast his vote and a war trip aboard the Japanese flagship Idzumo with plenty of action with the Chinese at Chapei.

Other news features include the opening of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, scenes of the revolt in Palestine, plenty of airplane shots and dog shows.

For the ladies there are Hollywood styles and for young and old the inevitable Mickey Mouse in "Mickey's Amateurs."

Artificial Barnacles.

Barnacles used in water-front scenes for a Warner Brothers picture, would fool the canniest fish or sailor—but are made of rubber to avoid injury to swimmers.

Wait Till He Learns.

Ralph McHugh, inveterate cigar smoker, won't know until he reads this that that new brand of cigars his wife bought him, and which he likes so well, are de-nicotined.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Ernst Lubitsch Once More Demonstrates Greatness In Manipulating Delicate Nuances in Brittle Film

'Angel,' on Earle Screen, Is Flawlessly Acted; Spitalny Scores.

"ANGEL." Paramount picturisation of a play by Melchior Lengyel, English adaptation by Guy Bolton and Russell Mederaft, with screen play by Samson Raphaelson, starring Marlene Dietrich, with Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas, Edward Everett Horton, Laura Hope Crews, Ernest Cossart, Herbert Mundin, Dennie Moore and Phillis Coghlan. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

With that consummate artistry that is inseparably linked with his name, Ernst Lubitsch, in "Angel," has evolved a triangular comedy-romance of infinite discretion and good taste from a basic story which, in other less adroit hands, might easily have degenerated into a mere exhibit of offensive daring.

BELL.

Never by specific word, gesture or situation is there revealed a single incident of precarious character in the unfolding of a tenuous fable of a British statesman, his charming wife, who entertains delusions of unhappiness and neglect, and the debonair young Englishman who enters the scene at an opportune time to disrupt a luxurious household by the usual crass devices of the adventurous and unscrupulous interloper. Yet every opportunity for such breeches of the proprieties is inherent in the content and movement of the play.

The tale is initiated with a long, traveling, silent scene, photographed through the windows of a palatial establishment in Paris which indentifies itself immediately in the spectator's mind as a dubiously clandestine rendezvous where accepted social usages are checked at the door and a hardened and wily presiding madame "arranges" whatever surreptitious pseudo-romances may be desired. This, however, becomes a "salon" and its guiding spirit the Grand Duchess Anna Dmitrievna, a conveniently gracious dowager with a suggested background of some cultural significance.

It is here that Maria Barker and Anthony Halton meet with accidental propriety when she stumbles into the room where he is waiting and is mistaken for the grand duchess. Her marital perplexity and his quest of agreeable Parisian diversion seem to be solved by the single happy circumstance of the wrong doorknob. His infatuation is instant and impassioned; hers less demonstrative and cleverly noncommital.

Coincidence Moves Rapidly.

Then, by another twist of coincidence, Halton and Sir Frederick Barker meet in England, discover that they were wartime sharers of the bounties of the same French sweetheart and become immediate friends. To his congenial, newfound comrade, Halton relates the fervid tale of the "Angel" he has recently met in Paris and is invited to the Barker home to dine.

From his familiar posturing of events is derived the drama's psychological conflict—a friendly tussle with an ominous contretemps that betrays no sinister actuality but conveys, by implication that is as subtle as it is provocative, the problem with which the three are faced. It is dissolved with acceptable logic, the completely believable repression of ladies and gentlemen arranging their lives in as orderly a fashion as may be and without the obtrusion of a jarring or even mildly disturbing note.

Lubitsch has decorated his picture with delicate and whimsical humor and has chosen a cast for its interpretation before the cameras that do high credit to his impeccable treatment of an inflammable theme.

Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas impart the distinction of compelling realism to the three dominant roles, Mr. Marshall as the innocently neglectful husband, immersed in affairs of state; Mr. Douglas as the wooer whose ardor is not permitted to lead him into impetuous indiscretions—except, again, by gossamer implication. In roles of less vital consequence, Laura Hope Crews, as the Grand Duchess; Ernest Cossart, as a perceptive butler; Edward Everett Horton, as a slightly twittery gentleman's gentleman, and Herbert Mundin reenforce the film's claim to distinguished merit. Herr Lubitsch's eye for visual beauty is revealed in every scene.

Spitalny's Girls Triumph.

The artistic eminence of the screen feature is matched by the superlative musicianship of Phil Spitalny's "Hour of Charm," all-feminine orchestra, on the stage. The performance of this brilliant group yesterday afternoon reaffirmed the conviction that there is no comparable organization on the American stage. In ensemble work, vocal and instrumental solo interludes and diversified specialties, yesterday's program was such as to deserve the volume of applause it received.

Maxine, the deep-throated singer; Evelyn and her magic violin; the Three Little Words, Dale Winthrop, tap dancer extraordinary; the eight-instrument violin section, Rochelle and Lola at the two grand pianos, and all of the rest scored triumphantly in a program that spanned the full range of musical composition from popular hits to standard classics. "The Bugle Call Rag," "Tiger Rag," "Johnny One-Note," "Serenade in the Night" and a new version of "Frankie and Johnny" were executed with as much skill as Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody, "Ravel's "Bolero," Evelyn's "Stardust" and the string section's "The Bee." A genuine musical feast.

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's house orchestra further augment a feature that may possibly stamp Ernst Lubitsch as being a little ahead of his time in the assumption of a mass appreciation of so subtle and deliberately paced a work.

Sang Early.

Stars Who Lend Distinction to Lubitsch Film

Metropolitan

That gay marital comedy, "The Awful Truth," is breezing along through a second week of its repeat downtown engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater. If ever there was a camera frolic that deserved such enthusiastic public support, this hilarious concoction is it.

In recruiting Irene Dunne and Cary Grant for the costellar roles, Columbia displayed more than ordinary acumen. Although Miss Dunne has proved her gay command of the lighter demands of farcical fireworks in earlier vehicles, and Mr. Grant did very well for himself, and the picture, in "Topper," neither heretofore has quite touched the high mark of uproarious fun both reach in demonstrating that the "awful truth" is not nearly so black as it has been imagined.

There is a trip-hammer play of verbal shots in this subject that keep it going at top speed, even in those infrequent moments when action calms down from its accustomed cyclonic velocity. The motivation of both lines and action is devised with a skill that compounds a fair degree of rationality for all that happens in a whimsy that would seem utterly insane in a detailed recapitulation.

Songs Add to Riot.

Miss Dunne, of course, sings now and then as the lunacy progresses, and so does Joyce Compton, just to add variety to a piece that seems to have thought of everything. Mr. Grant bursts into no roundelays, but Ralph Bellamy does, in his droll Oklahoman way, and "Mr. Smith," the wire-haired terrier, whose real name is Asta, also yips out a few notes when the going gets too rough for his canine taste. These four are the mainsprings of the fun, but they are not in exclusive control of everything amusing that happens.

Among the contributing accessories to the goings-on, Cecil Cunningham, Miss Compton, Alexander D'Arcy, Marguerite Churchill, Esther Dale, Robert Warwick, Mary Forbes, Claude Allister and Zita Moulton have most to do with popping buttons and splitting vests.

"The Awful Truth" has been staged with an opulent eye to pictorial effect as well as an uncanny notion of what really is convulsingly funny. There is a combination of elements here that one seldom encounters on the screen in a single picture dedicated exclusively to laughter. It is especially recommended to two kinds of people—those with ingrown grouches and those without.

Three-Day Record Crashing Movies

Ilona Massey has a unique record of a newcomer in Hollywood. The day she stepped off the train on her arrival from Vienna, she stopped at the studio for a make-up test, the second day for fittings, and the third day to begin her role in "Rosalie" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 5.—Idol Chatter: Bet Loretta Young would trade her stardom for a marriage as happy as that of her less successful sister, Sally Blane. Wonder why so many glamour gals fall for Brian Aherne. Hollywood's three musketeers; Edward Everett Horton, Charles Ruggles and Arthur Treacher — the boys are inseparables. She looks fragile, but Heather Angel is Filmville's champion physical culturist. Act alikes: Herbert Marshall and Clive Brook.

HERBERT MARSHALL.

Never saw anything more exotic than Joan Crawford's new fall hats. Fredric March says prayers every night before retiring—wonder what he asks for? An adjective-loaded press dispatch refers to Martha Raye's face as "nomadic"—and it has me puzzled. Shirley Temple is a lot prouder of the coral collection she brought back from Hawaii than she is of her No. 1 box-office rating.

If sweet dispositions paid dividends in screen popularity, Mary Brian would be Hollywood's greatest star. Things that make me feel old: the announcement of Jackie Coogan's marriage. And why shouldn't Tamara Geva, the Oriental dancer, be exotic—she was born in Leningrad on St. Patrick's Day to a Swedish mother and a Tartar father. Cited for the Croix de Merite: Frances Dee—in private life she always insists on being called Mrs. Joel McCrea. Amazing-but-true note: Uh-huh, Mae West, as a child, really played Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Wallace Beery today is enjoying the dislike of a dozen M-G-M executives. Last night they had dinner at the Beery manse and gorged themselves upon the entree—a delicately flavored white meat that one and all pronounced the best chicken ever served. After dinner, when they had gathered in the den, Wally solemnly took the floor. "Gentlemen," said he, "some time ago, when I came back from location in Utah and told you that people eat rattlesnakes, you called me a liar—and I told you that you were just the victims of imagination. Tonight I decided to put it to proof . . . now, that meat you had for dinner . . ." Seems that is as far as he got, for most of his guests were suddenly seized by mal de mer. This morning Wally mailed each one the affidavit of his butcher, attesting the fact that the meat served was, in fact, chicken. And to each statement he clipped this note: "Now, maybe you will agree that imagination rules the stomach."

Standing near the Paramount gates this morning when a candid cameraman tried to steal a picture of Claudette Colbert. She covered her face and ran, thereby exciting my curiosity. Later, on the set, I asked her "why" and she informed me, very coldly, that all "whys" aside, there are just two things she will not tolerate, to wit: A candid snapshot and a photograph showing the left side of her face. She offered no explanation and I cannot give one—the left side of Claudette's face looks fine to my uncritical eye.

On screen, Warner Baxter is the most romantic of Lotharios; off screen, he is the most devoted of husbands. He tells me that he never buys anything or makes any decision without first consulting Mrs. Baxter. When he is playing a role, she rehearses him in his scenes every night until his performance meets with her approval—and yet she is the one Hollywood wife who never visits a set. Warner always plans his vacation trips to include her and arranges for her accommodations. Two or three days before the scheduled start she invariably decides to stay home. Their romance is one of the exceptions that prove the Hollywood rule.

Assistant Director Is 'Patsy' Of the Motion Picture Studio

"I am a first-rate heel who gets into everyone's hair.

"To the actors I am a constant annoyance, their mortal enemy; to the extras, a bully; to the director a usurper of his functions, and to all departments involved in motion picture production, an excitable madman.

"I am an assistant director."

With this highly explosive self-portrait off his chest, Walter Mayo, assistant to Archie Mayo in the production of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Adventures of Marco Polo," synthetises his peculiar position in motion pictures.

He realizes he is the civilian equivalent of a sergeant drillmaster; tough, efficient and volcanic. Without him and his breed the film business would lose a lot of its glamor and much of its time-clock precision. He observes, too, that there have been few changes in his profession since the first caricaturist maligned his fellow craftsmen by depicting them as "yes men," although most everything else has progressed.

They don't have to strain their lungs as much as Bert Sutch used to do in the old days when D. W. Griffith demanded assistants who could be heard a mile away. With a suitable megaphone, Sutch could careen his voice over hill and dale for a good mile and a half.

Today there isn't much need for such strenuous vocal ability and a good quarter-mile voice is all one needs in a 100-foot stage.

Even in Hollywood, few people have any clear idea of what an assistant director does. Years of ridicule have made him appear something of a clown, with extraordinary vocal chords, who yesses directors, browbeats extras, puts down officers' chairs for producers and distributes soothing syrup to tempestuous stars.

More articulate in expression than most, Mayo epitomizes hi sjob in this fashion: "I'm instructed by the production department to see that a certain number of scenes are shot on a certain day. They present me with the names of actors; I have to wake them up in the morning, see that they are on sets in time, pick 'stand-ins' for them, check their makeup, round them up during lunch hour and rehearse them in dialogue.

"I have personally to pick the extras, check them through makeup and wardrobe, keep them moving, compute their overtime every day and see that they don't chew gum.

"I have to check the electrical, makeup, camera, grip, property and art departments. I have to see that no time is lost, which means hurrying actors, extras, and all departments involved in shooting.

"But seeing that things run smoothly and according to schedule is not all. Each night we are called to accounting by the production departments. We are held to strict accounting by the production departments. We are held to strict accounting for every minute lost. If a director makes four 'takes,' we must explain why, and upon us is placed the fantastic burden of making up that time. When the studio stages are dark, we must make up schedules for the following day and somehow fit this in with actor commitments, budget allowances and a deluge of conflicting orders from director, production heads and from anyone else who may be important."

Watching Mayo at work is sure index to his position in the cinematic scheme. Recently a great location high-lighted the filming of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," in which Gary Cooper is starring. Nine hundred and fifty extras were employed in night battle scenes 35 miles distant from Hollywood at Malibu Lake.

The task of regimenting this activity, hiring and transporting the extras to the location site, paying them off and checking wardrobe, makeup, subsistence and the thousand and one details were all his.

Harvest Dancers Sign for Movies

Agnes Melcoll and Walter Cosden, youthful winners of the third annual Harvest Moon Ball in Madison Square Garden, New York City, have been signed for roles in Ginger Rogers' new solo starring picture, "Having Wonderful Time."

One of the awards for winning the New York contest was a trip to Hollywood. One evening while there Miss Melcoll and Cosden were dancing informally at the Trocadero, when they were "spotted" by Pandro S. Berman, producer of "Having Wonderful Time." The contract followed.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 5.

ALICE HUGHES.

OUR TIGHT little world has just been thrown into a jolly tantrum by the report that Babs Beekwith, thought by many devotees to be the most gorgeous brunette photographic model in town, has just said "yes" to the matrimonial pleas of Winthrop Gardiner, jr., offshoot of one of the East's proudest clans. Since this city is still obsessed by the beauteous models and mannequins and their affairs, this is practically stop-press news along "Swing Alley," or Fifty-second street.

Babs, whose full name is Bethany Anne (for Heaven's sake), is actually a local product! Very good family, as they say, one of her remote ancestors being President John Quincy Adams. As for Winnie, he is too handsome to be true, as well as azure-blooded, Gardiner's Island, off the tip of Long Island, is the only British royal grant still in possession of the family which snatched it from the crown in colonial times. That will give you an idea about Winnie! Anyway, it's a big and tasty romance, and there's joy in the Stock Club!

I hardly need add that the models are still the loveliest and most feted and pursued babes in the city, next to the more beautiful debs with chunky bankrolls. And there's always the most professionally popular and demanded mannequin of any given moment. The present queen of the posing crop is a blonde named Dana Jenny, who must be busy posturing and strutting in elegant clothes every hour of the day. Out of curiosity I checked a recent issue of Vogue, and found La Jenny in no less than 12 pictures, both editorial and advertising. Cash in, kid, for there may be a new photographers' pet next week!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Another girl got Beatrice Kaufman's job as Eastern story scout for movie man Samuel Goldwyn—and her name is Dorothy Modisett. Lunching with her the other day, she told me she has joined our club by adopting a three-week-old baby boy, and is so excited about him that she fears she can't tell a swell story from a dud.

Girls who are interested in the life and career of a fashion illustrator had better get hold of a new book called "Fashion Illustration," by Christine Schumck and Virginia Jewel. It is suitable for beginners, and relates and illustrates the work of such Fifth avenue aces as Joan Spades, Dorothy Hood and Jane Miller, all toppers, in their line.

• • • •

I have to keep an eye on the girls here or I can't detect them, so thoroughly do they change their types. Take Barbara Barondess. A few years back I knew her as a plump blonde trying to crash the theater. Yesterday I saw her nibbling lettuce at the Algonquin, a slender brunette now, a product of the Hollywood glamour-mills! Confusing and puzzling to a static stick-in-the-mud like I.

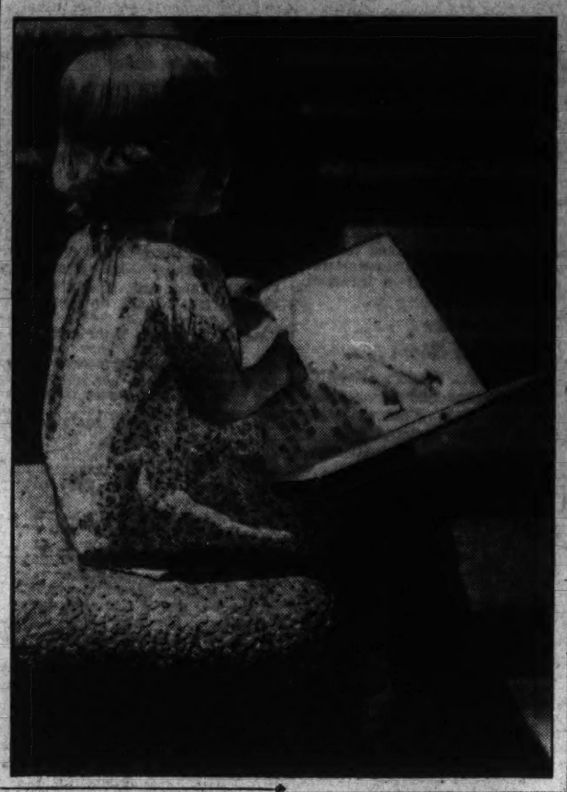
Juvenile Clothes Stress Comfort, Simplicity

The little girl below is wearing a printed cotton dress that is not only styled for comfort and action but is made in a printed pattern harmonious with her diminutive size. The tiny boy (right), wears a cotton suit, equally appropriate for kindergarten and play; trousers are designed for stooping and climbing and sleeves permit plenty of arm action. Note that buttons are arranged so that he can dress and undress himself.



The white and red dress worn by the wee girl below has all the qualities which make it ideal for a growing, active child. Outstanding features are lowered neckline and round buttons which enable the tiny Miss to fasten it with ease; full shoulders and short sleeves. The skirt is a nice length and the deep hem provides for lengthening as she grows taller. All the garments shown here may be made at home with commercial patterns.

Color, Strength Suggested for Child's Clothes

Comfort and Workmanship Important Factors in Selection.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

PERHAPS you can wear any color of the rainbow and it won't offend your esthetic sense—but young Johnnie or Mary may not respond in this manner at all. Many children, contends Miss Clarice Scott, assistant clothing specialist of the Bureau of Home Economics, are super-sensitive to color and because the mother is not, the youngsters suffer needlessly, and no one knows the real cause of the trouble. Children like gay colors, she says, so why not let them wear them? Such colors are also a protection in traffic, since a child in a bright garment is more easily seen by a motorist than in an outfit of somber color that blends into the roadway.

Miss Scott and staff in the textile division of the bureau have been engaged in research and experiments with children in fabric and design, in an effort to plan ideal clothes for small children. The results of their findings are being compiled in booklet form.

In selecting clothes for children Miss Scott considers the following points necessary, listed in order of importance: Comfort, design, workmanship, fabric. In the matter of comfort, sleeves should be short and armholes roomy; fullness across back and chest; dresses for little girls, loose-fitting, with collarless necklines; for little boys, blouses should be sufficiently long and trouser legs wide enough for comfort and yet neat in appearance.

Simplicity Urged.

Children's clothes, advises Miss Scott, should be designed with simplicity as the keynote; style features which stress comfort as well as attractiveness and "cuteness." Trimming should be chosen with great discrimination — unnecessary appliques, and such, that are "stuck on" have no meaning and give a child the wrong idea of what is good taste in clothes.

Workmanship is one of the most important phases of children's clothing, maintains Miss Scott. "Before planning or selecting clothes for your child," she said, "watch children at play. They squat a lot in their climbing, playing with blocks and sand piles; double up and stretch in all sorts of positions when playing. Consequently, clothes have to be well made to withstand the severe strain, hard wear and frequent laundering they are certain to get. To do this and at the same time insure comfort, seams and finishes should be narrow, flat, smooth and pliable; thread must match the fabric in strength. Stitching needs to be close and properly adjusted, and reinforcements added to places likely to be strained."

Modern methods of child training emphasize the educational value of clothing that children can put on and take off with little or no help—the "self-help" type of garments. In dresses and suits, plackets at the front within easy reach and fastenings few in number and of a type that a young child can manage encourage self-reliance, Miss Scott pointed out. Buttons, she claims, are of tremendous importance and should be of medium size, round and flat with a slight groove that keeps fingers from slipping off; very large or very small buttons, snaps, hooks and eyes are too difficult to manage. Slide fasteners are easy for tiny hands to manipulate if they are properly used, but they need to suit the design as well as the weight of the garment.

Should Be Soft, Flexible.

Materials for young children's clothes should complement the designs and aid in bringing out the good points of the youngster. Because of a child's small size, fabrics should be yielding and flexible, if play is to be free and unhampered. Also because children's skin is sensitive and easily irritated by anything prickly or harsh, only materials of soft, smooth textures are comfortable. Cottons or washable wools, depending upon the climate and weather, are recommended by Miss Scott. Whatever the material, it should be pre-shrunk, color-fast and impervious to sun-fading and the like. "There is nothing worse," she remarked, "than a dress or suit made too large and the child made to grow into it. The same applies to clothes which shrink and fade and thus never look fresh and neat."

It is a splendid idea, Miss Scott believes, for children to be allowed to help select their own clothes; they have an innate sense about designs and colors which are becoming, and it helps to develop a fashion-consciousness which is helpful in later years. "However," she added, "children have such primitive taste, they need guidance in clothes selection."

Summing up all of the important phases of children's clothing, Miss Scott said the main thing to consider was that children lead a life of play and that clothes, either for winter or summer, should be planned with that in mind. Also, she emphasized, little boys and little girls should look like juveniles and not like miniatures of their parents; clothes should be designed especially for children, not duplications or adaptations of adult stylings.

Record Daring Of Decolletes Marks Styles

In most localities those months from early November to late March are known as the formal season. The carefree days of early autumn are gone and women begin to worry about back and shoulder beauty. This year the decolletes are more daring than ever before, with many dresses strapped over only one shoulder. The screen stars who wear formal dresses as long as eight or ten hours a day while before the cameras maintain any girl can have lively shoulders.

Jane Wyman is a firm believer in the long-handled back brush which she puts into vigorous motion during her morning shower. She uses lots of soap and makes her back tingle with the firm circular motion of her brush.

Ann Sheridan develops her back by daily boat-rowing exercises. This rotary movement of the arms keeps the back muscles smooth and firm.

June Martel, whose sun-tan didn't follow the lines of her decolletage, spent many nights bleaching it out with olive oil and lemon juice. To make sure there are no streaks of tan, she uses a liquid body make-up in a creamy tone.

Mabel Todd has her back massaged at least twice a week with the same fine creams she puts on her face.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Prevention of Chilblains.

I saw five sick people in a clinic the other day, all suffering from disturbance in the circulation of their feet. One of them was a potential case of chilblains. That is, he was a case of chilblains last winter, and may possibly be next winter, although he has been taking some preventive treatment this summer and fall which it is hoped may reduce the incidence, or perhaps even entirely prevent his attacks.

All of these conditions are in some way interrelated. The feet are in bad shape as regards circulation and gangrene, which is lack of circulation, is commoner in the feet than anywhere else in the body. The ways in which the feet suffer on the basis of circulation are two. First, the circulation tends to get bad in any peninsula way from the heart, which makes the arterial circulation of the feet faulty, and, second, the feet are dependent, and the load of blood which goes up from them in returning to the heart suffers under more mechancial stress than blood returning from any other part of the body, which makes the venous circulation bad.

The arteries of the feet, like the arteries of all other parts of the body, are under the control of the vegetative nervous system. This system works while you sleep and entirely without your volition or control. When a certain kind of impulse shoots along these nerve tendrils to the arteries of the feet, their muscles contract, the amount of blood that goes through them is diminished and the parts blanch. When another kind of impulse goes along these nerves, the muscles of the arteries relax, more blood goes into them, and the foot gets red and hot.

The impulses which cause these changes are mostly heat and cold, and the results are always, under normal conditions of health, beneficial and protective. But sometimes the mechanism gets mixed up, and impulses without any recognizable or sensible cause go down to the blood vessels. In one of these conditions, which was described by a physician named Raynaud, and is therefore called "Raynaud's disease," the skin on the toes, for no conceivable reason, at times gets white and cold and insensible. Attacks of this kind may follow each other at short intervals until they become practically continuous, and the blood supply is so fully cut off that the skin decays from lack of nutrition—the condition of gangrene. The most curious feature of this disease is that it is symmetrical—both little toes, or both big toes, for instance, will be the seat of the change. Obviously the mechanism is that the arteries go into spasm, but what causes that no one knows.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. Costume Depends On Right Jewelry

A costume is a hit or a miss depending upon the wearer's choice in jewelry. It is better to wear none at all than to couple sports jewelry with formal clothes or to use delicate evening things with a tailored suit.

Bette Davis, who is a connoisseur of costume jewelry, particularly likes bracelets and has them for every occasion. For active sports wear she has bracelets woven of bright leather thongs and others of polished links of wood. For spectator sports and with some street clothes she likes her charm bracelet. Her clever little charms all tell a story and some are workable, like the little motion picture camera, which actually cranks. With her most tailored suits Bette wears slim gold hoops, some of which are set with semiprecious stones and others have engraved designs. For evening she adores bracelets with plenty of flash and sparkle.

Plain Crepe Frock Best For 'After Game' Dinner

New York (AP).—For girls who are going on to cocktails and dinner after the football game, the fashion world decrees "crepe frocks, simple in cut, accented with gold or glitter."

Most of these are worn with fur coats—beaver, lapin, squirrel or Australian opossum over colored crepe or sheer wool dresses, and Hudson seal or squirrel with sleek black frocks. A new square-cut, box swagger model is the favorite.

New Kidskin Glove.

Priscilla Lawson has discovered a new kidskin glove, chemically treated, which she wears for the protection of her hands. The movie actress wears them driving, golfing, while gardening and during the night, at which time she applies cream and the glove preserves the soft texture of the skin.

Gridiron Days Raise Problems Of Etiquette

Girl Needs Chaperon and Should Pay Own Living Expenses on Week-End.

By Margaret Wallace

WITH the football season in full swing, many points of etiquette in regard to entertaining, chaperonage and grandstand behavior arise.

Girls who are invited to Washington or some other college town for the games by one of the players or students should pay their own railroad expenses and their own hotel or boarding house bills. It is quite proper for a young man to arrange for the girl he has invited to a game to be the guest of his family or of friends. In this case the hostess, whether she be a member of the family or a friend, should write and invite the young woman personally. No girl should accept such an invitation through the young man who has asked her to the game. It is also proper for a brother to invite his sister to be his guest to attend a game and ask her to invite other girls also. In this case the sister is really the hostess.

The Girl Pays.

It is good form for a young man to make all living arrangements for the girl whom he has invited for the game, but she must pay for them. It is proper for a young man to take the girl who has come to town for the game out to luncheon and dinner and of course to teas and other parties, at which time of course he is the host and pays all expenses. There is no reason he should not take her to breakfast also.

Even in these modern days of freedom it is not considered good form for young girls to come to Washington or other college centers for football games if they are to stay overnight without some type of chaperonage. It is not always necessary for a girl to bring her own chaperon with her, although some mothers will not allow any other arrangements. It is quite good form under the new code for a young man to arrange for chaperonage for a girl he has invited to be his guest for the game and the festivities attending it. Very often such a girl guest is invited to a fraternity house or some other such place with the mother of one of the young men and wives of college officials. If the girl is a guest of some fraternity or group under proper chaperonage she does not pay her own living expenses, but pays her own railroad fare.

Grandstand Boors.

Etiquette of the grandstand is very important. While there should be no attempt to discourage a free and easy enjoyment of the game, it is not necessary to be conspicuous or to become so enthusiastic and excited that it seems necessary to stand up all the time, obstructing the view of those in the back. Late comers to football games are chief offenders against good form. They should wait for lulls in the games before they pass to their seats. While there is no rule of etiquette against umbrellas at a football game, those who have consideration for others will wear raincoats and hats that will withstand the rain. Besides obstructing the view of those around, there is always danger of the umbrella striking in some one's eye. It is really a social error or at least a lack of good common sense to wear clothes that will not stand rain or snow at a football game.

In this day of constant smoking by men and women, smokers at football games who do not have consideration for the comfort of those about them are to be listed among the offenders against good form. Smoking is permitted on most grandstands, but the cigarette should be manipulated so that the ashes will not blow against the clothes of those near by and perhaps burn a hole in a cherished polo or raccoon coat. It is also polite to notice which way the wind blows and try to keep the smoke from getting in the eyes and face of persons nearby.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How Does One Know When One's in Love? Asks Girl Who Thinks She's in Love But Isn't Positive.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can one really tell when one is in love? I am 20 years old and for 18 months have known a certain young man a few years older. Although I have known and gone with other boys during this time, I have spent more time with him than with any of the others. Neither of us thought about love. We were just good friends who enjoyed each other's company and had lots of things in common. Then I was ill for several weeks and he came to see me every day. When I had recovered, he told me that he had come to realize I meant more to him than a friend; that he loves me and wants me to wait for him, until he finishes his college work. That means three years.

• • • •

He is really everything a girl would want in a man—ambitious, considerate, kind, patient and not the least bit jealous. He does not expect me to give up my other boy friends, until I am ready to do so. I told him that I love him. But my problem is this—I'm not positive. I ask myself; do I want to give him up? And the answer is: no. I would rather be with him than with anyone else, or so I think when I am with him. Then there is no doubt. But when I am away from him I am sometimes doubtful.

• • • •

Like all silly girls, I used to read a lot of romantic stories and maybe down in my heart I'm still waiting for my hero to sweep me off my feet. Do you think that mutual understanding of each other is just as important? Should I wait for him? My family approves of him and everybody thinks highly of him. I know that I could be content as his wife, and I sincerely wish that I were sure of my love for him. I don't want to lead him on and possibly hurt him later. Honestly, I just don't know what to do. Please advise me. Sincerely, UNCERTAIN.

• • • •

Epigram Yields Answer.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Someone has authored an epigram which I believe neatly covers your case. It is to the effect that when a man wonders if he's in love, he is, and when a woman wonders if she's in love, she isn't. I think you are both touched and flattered by this boy's declaration of love and indirect proposal of marriage; unquestionably you find him a very congenial and entirely restful companion; but so far, at least, you are not in love with him. It is my belief that one who is really in love more often loves the beloved more profoundly and rapturously in his absence than in his presence. When it is otherwise, beware. To love in his presence and to doubt in his absence means, very largely, that one is more spellbound by physical infatuation that any deeper or more enduring bond of sympathy and understanding.

• • • •

However, since you have three years to wait before his schooling is finished and he can seriously consider marriage; and since he is not jealous of your other men friends and doesn't demand or expect that you give them up, there is no reason why you should be in a hurry to burn all your bridges behind you, in the sense of swearing undying and undivided love for him.

• • • •

In my opinion, it will be better all around if you sincerely admit the existence of doubt. It should be consolation and encouragement enough for him, in this early stage of serious courtship, to know that you love him a little. It is up to him to give you cause to love him more and more as time goes on, and that is what he will likely do, if you keep him guessing just a little. It is better that you should not be finally committed to loving only him with your whole heart, if you must wait on him to finish his education. M. H.

Sorority Seeks Members.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Quite often I have read in your column letters from girls who have no friends, for one reason or another, and who seem to have no opportunity for making friends. I hope you will think this suggestion of mine, for helping such girls, is a good one. A sorority to which I belong is planning to take in some new members and we would be glad to hear from girls who would be interested in such an organization. We have dances, teas, bowling, theater parties and many other interesting activities. My telephone number is LIncoln 7074-J. I am corresponding secretary for Theta Rho Sigma Sorority. Very sincerely,

DOROTHY PAYNE.

Paris Combines Furs With Embroideries

Paris (AP).—Embroideries combine with furs. White ermine makes a scarf that is tied in a bow to front a black duvetine suit. An ermine muff accompanies it. Both fur pieces are trimmed with black ermine tails.

Many a fabric coat has sleeves made entirely of fur—in beaver or seal. Some have backs of fur and fronts of fabric.

Black Astrakhan is used with olive green wool in one attractive model. A row of fancy braid runs down the side to separate the two. There's a matching Astrakhan muff—with a pair of pocket flaps of green wool. In fact, muffs make chic accessories. Many are small bolster and flat shapes. Some are made entirely of fur. Others combine both fur and fabric.

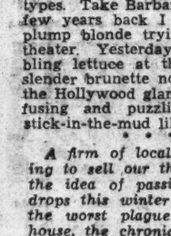
Learn Dancing At Home

ORCHIDS to Ted and Marta. A week ago they waltzed jerkily, with such a funny hopping motion they had everybody smiling. Now they're smooth as silk.



What happened? They sent for the sample dance diagrams and instructions used by a famous teacher. Then they practiced each step—with the diagram before them—until they were letter-perfect.

Gone are the bobs and jerks. To get that floating, swaying motion that makes the waltz so enchanting they take a long step on the first beat of each measure, slightly bending the knee of the supporting leg. On the second and third beat they straighten knees.

Try it yourself in the simplest waltz step—the open waltz. Once you get it you swirl easily from open waltz to forward waltz; you're a vision of grace in the turn and hesitation point.

In the same quick, simple way you can learn to dance the swingy fox-trot, the subtle tango, the sensuous rumba. Diagrams show you just how to place your feet, how to keep time.

In our 40-page booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," a well-known teacher gives diagrams and instructions for 26 popular dance steps—rumba, waltz, fox-trot and tango. A home course that turns you into an accomplished dancer.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THERE are just a few pounds between pleasingly plump and buxom and they usually represent a weight problem for the short, stocky girl.

If you are the short buxom type you won't be able to slim down very fast on the daily reducing menus. There is nothing fair about it, but you can't have as many calories as the other reducers. To lose satisfactorily you must keep your daily calorie intake very close to the 1,000 mark. Such a rigid calorie restriction is generally necessary for the stocky girl under five feet three.

Calorie requirements are based on weight in comparison to height and and on temperament. Due to your build you have a relatively small surface area for your weight, and therefore burn few calories. In addition, you may have an easy going disposition, a disinclination to move fast, and a digestive tract that absorbs calories like a sponge. If so, there is something in your complaint that you gain weight on a canary's rations.

On 1,000 calories a day there is very little, if any allowance for extras. It takes 800 to 1,000 calories to supply the protective foods needed daily and without these foods you reduce your health along with your weight. In making up any reducing diet, the first thing to do is to make a list of the essential protective foods and their calorie equivalent. Whether you are short or tall, a safe reducing diet must include daily: A leberal serving of lean meat, one or two eggs, one or two glasses of buttermilk or skimmed milk, fresh fruit, fresh vegetables, a small portion of butter and two or three slices of whole grain bread. On that type slimming menu you could diet indefinitely, or until you reach normal weight, without harming your health.

The only elements curtailed in this menu are fats and carbohydrates, which supply energy. The energy deficit is made up by drawing on stored fat, which you can do at the rate of one to two pounds a week with perfect safety.

Trimming the daily menus down to your low calorie requirements means leaving off the desserts. You short, stocky folks really have my smypathy. You love to eat, but you don't eat very much because of this alarming tendency to add weight. You can keep your weight under control, however, by choosing low calorie foods that are filling but not fattening.

Mr. Cosmelli's arrival is not fixed yet, and he may not be here until January. He is married and has several children. Until his new appointment he served as Counselor of the Italian Embassy in Brussels and is now representing his country at the Peace Conference being held in the Belgian capital.

The other new appointee is Count Gabriel de Gramont, son of the Duc de Gramont and a member of one of France's most distinguished families. He will arrive today to be Attache of the embassy, having just taken his exams for the French diplomatic service last summer. This is his first post.

Ralph J. Totten Gives 'At Home'

By Elizabeth Ford.

The lion in the drawing room at the "at home" given yesterday afternoon at his apartment on Ontario road by Ralph James Totten, former United States Minister to the Union of South Africa, hung up on the wall. At this point it might be well to explain that it was really a lion skin, one of the trophies from Mr. Totten's numerous expeditions into the veldt for big game during his stay on the palmy continent.

Lean-faced, smiling Mr. Totten is an inveterate hunter for he has just returned from Canada where he says he "got a bear" and with those keen eyes of his sighted along a gun, one can well believe him.

Host's Studio Of Much Interest

Guests hardly had their coats off and a glass of refreshment in their hands before they were ushered off by Mrs. George Oakley Totten, wife of Major Totten, jr., cousin of Ralph Totten, to see the latter's studio. Here the walls were hung with the host's other hobby—etchings, water colors and oils. One-fourth of the floor space was amply filled by an engraving press, which he uses in turning out his prints. Not only that but there was a fascinating shield—looking almost like a Mexican sombrero—all covered with green velvet and metal worked in intricate designs which no less a person than Haile Selassie had presented him when he went calling in Ethiopia.

Arriving at the party midway between 5 and 7 o'clock, were the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close. She wore black with silver fox and a small black hat in contrast to her soft white hair.

Bakers From Bristol Are Among Guests

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Baker who have been visiting in this country on vacation from Bristol, England, where he is American Consul. Renewing acquaintances among members of the foreign service set who were present, Mrs. Baker looked stunning in a simple black dress, relieved at the rather severe neckline by a round gold brooch. Her costume was topped off by a black Cossack hat.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. R. Bordon Reams who will soon be off to Copenhagen where he has received the post as Consul. Mrs. Reams wore very dark wine-colored velvet and a hat of the same shade, trimmed with fascinating little petals.

Mrs. Mason M. Patrick, wife of Maj. Gen. Patrick, U. S. A., retired, made a very svelte appearance in grey velvet, with silver fox and a small black, beret-shaped hat.

Among the guests also were the head of the foreign service school and Mrs. Klahr Huddle. She was all in black, her hat trimmed with a jaunty black veil.

Mrs. Owen Roberts And Her Daughter Back at Home Here

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, and her daughter have returned to their home at 1401 Thirty-first street in Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts spent most of the summer at their farm, Bryn Coed, in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Roberts took a motor trip through New England, stopping in Farmington, Conn., and in Gloucester, Mass., on her travels.

Mrs. Roosevelt Bid To Pay Cuba Visit

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been invited to visit Cuba, according to word from the Cuban Embassy yesterday, indicating that a letter to this effect had been sent to the First Lady by Dr. Luis Machado, president of the Cuban Tourists Corporation.

The officials added that the letter would be forwarded to Mrs. Roosevelt through the State Department here. Its contents, they declared, expressed the "great affection of the Cuban people for Mrs. Roosevelt," and also that the former "would have great satisfaction if they should be honored by receiving her on Cuban soil" at any time she might find it convenient to visit there.

Dr. Machado also expressed to Mrs. Roosevelt the gratitude of the Cuban people to President Roosevelt for his many acts of friendship toward their country.

Guests Enjoy Informal Tea Given by Hurjas

First in a series of small, informal teas to be given this season by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja at their new address, 2419 California street, yesterday's gathering was a success from start to finish. Invitations were "from 5 to 7 o'clock," but long after the latter hour, guests still lingered to enjoy the hospitality of a host and hostess who are past masters at entertaining either in formal or informal fashion.

Gay Gathering In Drawing Room

Mr. and Mrs. Hurja received in the drawing room where tea, cocktails and hors d'ouvres were served. The hostess, who is always attractive, looked especially lovely yesterday in a floor-length frock of black net, trimmed in red flowers around the hemline and on the shoulder. Guests presently gathered in little groups around the tea table, the fireplace, the miniature collection, or against the book-lined walls.

Later, some who wanted to see more of the house went on an exploring expedition and discovered the most interesting room in the dwelling—the library upstairs, with its handsome desk at one end, its priceless Jacson pictures and engravings and manuscripts, and, as would be expected, books all over the place. The music room, where the late-stayers gather to sing and play familiar songs, was also of special interest.

Mrs. Gibbons At Tea Table

Among the guests were Mrs. Stephen Gibbons, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who wore a chic black ensemble and presided at the tea table; Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot, whose trim brown frock and small brown hat was a pleasing contrast to a roomful of women in black; Mrs. Henderson Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bingham, the latter wearing a wide-brimmed black hat and a black frock cut on simple lines; Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Distler, she in black, also set off with accents of gold; Sherman Mittell, who had some interesting things to tell about the National Home Library Association, with which he is connected.

Also George Abell, journalist and author; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell, of the Canadian Legation; Mrs. Lida Sibona Hanson, author of "Eric, the Red," and translator of "Bibi, a Little Danish Girl," and Miss Emma Siboni, widely known painter; Thomas Burke, who reported that his wife, now on "the flying caravan" for the People's Mandate to End War, is safely in South America and is thrilled with her trip and the work to be done; Mrs. Ernestine Griggsby, national president of Delta Delta Delta Sorority, which, incidentally, is the one Mrs. Hurja joined back in her college days; Miss Gerry Dick, Mrs. Preston Macgoodwin, who will entertain at a luncheon next Tuesday honoring Mrs. George Messersmith, Miss Gerry Dick, and several others.

Dr. Wang Plans To Serve Chinese Food at 4 Dinners

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, will entertain at a series of small dinners this month, and will serve the food of his country at each.

The first will be held on Monday evening, and the others will be November 17, November 26, and November 30. All will be given at Twin Oaks, which is serving as the embassy.

Miss Yoeh E. Wang, elder daughter of the Ambassador, will entertain at a tea on November 16.

Miss Guiler Aids Bride at Wedding

Miss Patricia Guiler, daughter of Commander R. P. Guiler, U. S. N. retired, and Mrs. Guiler, of Washington, was the only bridal attendant at the wedding of Miss Barbara Frances Cary and Lewis Pembroke Brown, which took place at Middletown, R. I., Thursday afternoon.

The bride is the daughter of Commander Robert M. Cary, U. S. N., of the Naval War College, and Mrs. Cary. Mr. Brown is the son of Lewis F. Brown, of Arlington Heights, Mass. The ceremony by which they were united, was performed at the Berkeley Memorial Church, with the Rev. Duncan Fraser officiating. Only near relatives and a few friends were present.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE FRIDAY EVENING Supper Club dances began for the season last evening in the same place, with the same orchestra, and the same faces. The usual large crowd jammed the Sulgrave Club ballroom, as these affairs, given annually under the chairmanship of Mrs. John R. ("Ma") Williams, are among the most popular in the Capital. Dancing lasted until the small hours to the tune of Meyer Davis' orchestra—and Mr. Davis, who always makes at least the first and last dances of the series, was there.

Lady Lewis sat at a table near the head of the stairs in a party which included Mrs. Pearsons Rust, in black velvet, and Capt. William Ritchie, aide to the Secretery of War.

Among members of the committee present were Nancy Leiter, who also wore black velvet with an emerald clip in her hair. At her table was Miss Nancy Ordway and several others.

Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker were early arrivals and Mr. and Mrs. William Cushman with Jimmy Mitchell were other members of the committee. Mike McConihe was accompanied by his fiancee, Miss Marguerite Hagner, who wore an orchid corsage with her black gown. Their engagement was announced only a few days ago. Mrs. Jean de Sibour, the former Valerie Prochnik, was one of the few people there not wearing black. She had on a white gown with a draped neckline.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pulber sat with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark and several others. We also saw Enid Snow and Nancy Mann, the latter in a black velvet gown with gold lame top; Mrs. Haywood Newbold, Tinsley Garnett, Florence Harris, Eugene O'Dunn, George Williams, Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, Ethel Worthington, Stellita Stapleton, Rebeca Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, and Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr.

MARTA ABBA, who in a recent interview told American women to stop trying to be glamorous, nevertheless looked very much that way at the tea held yesterday afternoon in her honor by Mrs. Russell Bennett. The Italian star of "Tovarich" wore a simple but subtly cut black crepe gown, which made her look even blonder, and an off-the-face hat in the same shade with a crown which soared toward the ceiling.

Miss Abba is not yet 30. Yet she is the actress who did a lot toward making the plays of Pirandello popular. For several years she toured with an Italian troupe interpreting the maestro's works, and won a great name for herself. She knew not a word of English when she arrived in this country to play "Tovarich," and learned her part parrot-like.

* * * *

YESTERDAY'S TEA was just small enough so that guests could find a place to sit down and not have to scream at one another. Among those who met Miss Abba were the Czechoslovakian Minister and Mme. Hurban—the Minister, who is an authority on Russian, was telling some of the guests how to pronounce "Tovarich," as everybody had a different theory; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the latter in black and silver foxes; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil—their debutante daughter, Miss Caroline Cecil, is attending the Princeton game this week-end; Mme. Rajamaitri, who poured tea; Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, and Miss Diana Rowland.

The Marquis Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy, who gave a party for Miss Abba earlier in the week, was also there, as was the Marquis of Sant'Orsola, of the Embassy, and Count Fumasoni Biondi, Italian newspaper correspondent. Others were Miss Vera Bloom, Miss Diana Rowland, the Second Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Lucet, with the former's sister, Mlle. Anne Marie Lucet, and Frau Thomsen, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy. Dr. Thomsen, who is on a business trip to the West, has been spending several days in Santa Fe and is now going to Mexico for a brief stay.

Nearly 2,000 Patronize D. C. Bazaar Sponsored By Chinese Women's Group to Get War Relief

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Nearly 2,000 Washingtonians patronized the bazaar sponsored yesterday and Thursday at the Washington Club by the Chinese Women's Association for the benefit of the war relief fund—the second affair it has held since its organization in August.

The spirit of the modern Chinese woman was exemplified in the rapidity with which plans for the event were formed and the ability with which they were carried out. From the flower table in the lower reception hall of the club to the racks of mandarin coats in the ballroom, where the historical fashion show was presented, there was the atmosphere of a real bazaar. Tables of dolls, tables of tea, greeting cards, Chinese prints, linens, ivory and jade, brass, china, lingerie, jewelry and Chinese cakes attracted patrons from one room to the next to buy.

Many prominent Washington women assisted in selling. Some of them were dressed in Chinese robes and others wore their own American frocks, presenting an interesting picture beside the women of China, as the Occident and Orient joined hands in a merciful cause.

Fashion Show Is a Feature

Both days, from the hour of opening until that of closing in the evening, the bazaar was crowded with patrons. Both nights, because of the large attendance, it was necessary to repeat the historical fashion show.

J. C. Yang, of the Chinese division of the Library of Congress, almost overshadowed the women in the fashion display by the magnificence of his costumes. The most gorgeous he wore was that of a warrior of the late eighteenth century, which had been loaned by Mrs. Edgar G. Coursen, one of the Washington women who assisted in the event. The coat was of plum-colored satin, embroidered in gold nd turquoise dragons, with it he wore an ornate headdress and carried a great sword. He also appeared in a statesman's costume, which was the property of Mrs. Walter Lowdermilk.

The most elaborate of the women's costumes was that worn by Miss Clara Loo, the robe of a Manchu princess, loaned by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. Miss Loo, who is a resident of California, is here visiting her brother-in-law and sister, the Rev. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese church, and Mrs. Hung.

Miss Anfu Wang, one of the daughters of the Chinese Ambassador, wore a beautiful flowered headdress and a heavily embroidered red mandarin coat. Miss Anhsu Wang wore informal lounging pajamas and a dark blue coat, covered with embroidered butterflies in other colors. Their elder sister, Miss Yoeh Wang, who is president of the Chinese Women's Association, did not participate in the fashion show but was assisting in one place and then another in the bazaar. She wore a robe of dark green, embroidered in little single chrysanthemums.

Mme. Wang's Skirt Is Shown

Miss Lois Ing, daughter of the Counselor of the Embassy, wore a bride's costume, covered with good luck symbols, birds and flowers, and an elaborate headdress from which pearls hung like a veil. Her red skirt, however, was the most interesting part of her outfit. It was from the wedding gown of Mme. Wang, wife of the Ambassador, who sent it here by her daughters for the occasion. Little gold bells on the panels tinkled their announcement of the bride's approach.

Mrs. Margaret Yee, a bride of but a few weeks, wore her own modern bridal costume, a peach-colored satin gown and a cerise coat embroidered in silver and blue peacocks.

Miss Julia Tsien, a graduate student at American University, wore a Manchu summer costume and balanced her way in on heels which were exactly in the center of her little embroidered slippers.

Mrs. William Mayer and Mrs. Mason Gulick were among those who loaned costumes for the exhibition and among others who modeled them were Miss Marion Lee, a graduate student at Maryland University; Miss Jean Wen, Miss Mabel Leo, Meta Fong, who wore the children's costumes; Mrs. Yau and Miss Anna Lee, of New York.

Underwood & Underwood.

Junior D. A. R. Growing Here

Organization Formed Last April Attracts Women Between 21-35.

A new D. A. R., recently formed and already growing beyond all bounds of expectation, has adopted the name "Junior D. A. R."

Like the "Younger Set" of social circles, these young women, between the ages, approximately, of 21 and 35 years, are setting the pace with their separate meetings and their own ideas of good times and of constructive work. They begin by adopting the name of their chosen D. A. R. chapter, whose regent also is theirs. Their immediate presiding officer, however, is elected from among their own circle. Their meetings take form as desired, a luncheon, a tea, a friendly visit, a picnic, or perhaps a dinner-dance to which the younger set of the Sons of the American Revolution or of some other patriotic organization, is invited. Good times are interspersed with helpful, constructive work of their own choosing.

Last April, when this organization came into being, one day of the week of the National Congress was theirs. Mrs. Roger Williams, the initial chairman of these Junior D. A. R.'s in the District of Columbia, will speak on the subject before the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, November 12, at the residence of Mrs. Richard L. Hoxie and her sister, Mrs. Robert Clay Sherrill.

Jewish Home Tea Slated Wednesday

Another member-bring-a-member tea will be given by the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children at Denver in the Variety Club of the Willard Hotel Wednesday from 2 to 4 p. m. Members are making reservations with the chairman of the tea, Mrs. Hyman Berman, and the cochairman, Mrs. Joseph Zupnick.

The next open meeting, scheduled for Wednesday, November 24, will be a pajama shower. For admission to this meeting members will bring a pair of pajamas, sizes 5 months to 20 years. These will be turned over to the children of the Glenndale Sanatorium. A prominent speaker will address the gathering.

The second annual dance will be held at the Willard Hotel on December 8. Mrs. David Tavin is chairman of the dance, with Mrs. Al Blitz as cochairman and Mrs. Sam April in charge of the program.

Barnard College Club Planning Debate on Pacifist's Dilemma

Dorothy Detzer and Gardner Jackson to Present Opposing Views at Symposium Nov. 20; Alumnae of Other Colleges to Be in Audience.

"The Dilemma of the Liberal Pacifist" will be the subject of a symposium to be held under auspices of the Barnard College Club of Washington Saturday, November 20, at a luncheon meeting at Harvey's Restaurant.

Two speakers well known in Washington will present opposing views on the "Dilemma." Miss Dorothy Detzer, national executive secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, says, "What dilemma? There is no dilemma for the pacifist!"

Miss Detzer was a prominent delegate to the international conference of the league in Czechoslovakia this summer, where she talked on mandatory neutrality legislation.

Gardner Jackson, noted liberal journalist, connected with Labor's Non-Partisan League, the second speaker at the meeting, will demand a realistic answer to his question, "Can there be peace with the threatening growth of fascism?" Mr. Jackson, who became prominent as chariman of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, is chairman of the Washington branch of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy and has been chairman of the national committee on Rural Social Planning.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer—to her fellow alumnae Agnes Ernst, '07, and one of Barnard's most distinguished alumnae—will preside. Mrs. Meyer, active in local and national civic and political affairs, will present the speakers.

"I am glad," she said, "that Barnard College alumnae are taking the lead in a discussion of all sides of this vital and timely subject. I hope the two speakers are not so evenly matched that they will leave us in as much of a dilemma afterward as some of us are now."

The alumnae of Smith College, Radcliffe, Bryn Mawr, Boucher and members of other college clubs in Washington, as well as the public generally, have been invited. Reservations for seating at the luncheon are being made through Isabel Nelson, secretary of the Barnard College Club.

The reception committee, headed by Mrs. David Barr, the acting president, includes Miss Rhoda Milliken, Mrs. Bryan Batty, Mrs. Bernard Mayberry, Mrs. J. F. Herrick and Miss Mildred Curran.

Miss Uhl Is Honored.

Miss Augusta E. Uhl, Grand Regent of Court District of Columbia Catholic Daughters of America, has recently been appointed by the supreme regent, Miss Mary C. Duffy, as territorial deputy of the District of Columbia for a two-year period.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

TODAY is the day of the benefit card party and musicale being given by the Columbian women of George Washington University for their scholarship and student aid fund at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Tomas Caligas is general chairman of arrangements and has planned a program to follow the card playing.

It will open with 15 minutes of music by the Valencia Trio, which has been heard frequently in Washington—twice lately at the Cuban Embassy. Then Miss Sylvia Grazzini will be presented. She made her Washington debut a few weeks ago in "Rigoletto". Wednesday night she delighted her audience in the concert with Mme. Conti, and now is staying over especially for this afternoon's party. All the artists are giving their services.

Following her songs, Baby Gay Hess, "Washington's queen of the air," will entertain with ballet numbers, and Hester Bell Provenson, who also is well known on the radio, will read several poems.

An international note will be given the affair by the girls—several from the diplomatic set—who will sell candy, wearing native costumes. They will be Anita Caligas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Caligas; Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najero, who are among the patrons; Senorita Yolanda Alfaro, daughter of the former President of Panama and Senora de Alfaro; Senorita Laura Recinos, daughter of the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos, who also are patrons; Senorita Ana Arcaya, daughter of the former Venezuelan Minister; Senorita Ana Godoy, daughter of the counselor of the Dominican legation; Miss Jeanne M. O'Donnell, Miss Nancy McInerney, Miss Isola Moll and Miss Beverly Shah.

* * * *

MISS ELIZABETH EDWARDS, president of the Service League of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, doesn't really enjoy playing bridge at large benefit card parties. She helped with that given a few nights ago by the league at the Roosevelt Hotel, but she showed no enthusiasm about playing—and there's a reason.

Last winter she attended a similar party. The tables were placed near each other and the bidding at her table and the one just behind it, was going on at the same time. "One no-trump," she thought she heard from her partner and raised to "two." He, thinking she was making a forcing bid, went up to "game" . . . then they discovered that the initial bid had come from the other table!

Oh, and you should have seen the pretty little water-lily candy dishes Louise Hoover and her assistants were making out of paper napkins for the Service League party. No wonder the candy sold so well!

Prize Won By Salad of Cranberries

Mrs. Philips' Recipe Is a Hit With Turkey for Thanksgiving.

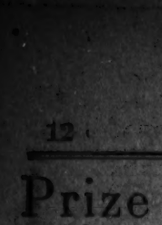
By Jean Green.

THE ENTRIES in the cranberry contest give promise of a festive and colorful array of holiday menus. The recipe winning first prize is a molded cranberry and celery salad filled with cubes of crisp celery, slivers of toasted almonds and tart diced apples. Mrs. B. C. Philips, 631 Allison street, wins the award of $3 for this recipe. It is a recipe that was served last Thanksgiving at her turkey dinner. It scored an instant hit and will be repeated on the menu again this Thanksgiving.



JEAN GREEN.

The success of preparation depends on the careful mixing of ingredients. The cranberries, sugar and water are cooked into a sauce and run through a coarse sieve before being blended with the softened gelatin. The chopped celery, almonds and apples are added after the gelatin starts to thicken. If desired, an orange can be used instead of the apple.

Molded Cranberry and Celery Salad.

1 quart of cranberries
2 cups of sugar
1 cup of water
2 tablespoons of gelatin, dissolved in ¼ cup of water
1 cup of celery, diced fine
¼ cup chopped apples
¼ cup of finely chopped toasted almonds

Cook cranberries, sugar and water together until the cranberries burst. Run through a coarse sieve and add softened gelatin. Set aside to cool. When mixture starts to thicken add other ingredients. Pour into molds and chill in the refrigerator. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise. This makes eight molds of salad.

A recipe that may be served either for dessert or as a relish wins the second award of $2. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. Mayo Smith, Riggs road, Berwyn, Md. She writes that all her friends have asked for her recipe and have found it delightful.

Cranberry Relish.

1 quart of cranberries
1 large orange
1 large apple
1½ cups of diced marshmallows
1 cup of chopped nuts
1 cup of granulated sugar

Put the cranberries, orange and apple through a medium blade of the food chopper. Save all the juice from the fruit to add to the mixture. Add the marshmallows, nuts and sugar and let stand over night in the electric refrigerator. When served for dessert, top with whipped cream.

The third prize of $1 was awarded to Irene Reardon, 1003 North Calvert street, Baltimore. Her recipe is for cranberry fritters, fried golden brown and dusted with powdered sugar.

Cranberry Fritters.

1 cup of flour
2 teaspoons of baking powder
¼ teaspoon of salt
1½ tablespoons of powdered sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons of milk
1 tablespoon of lemon juice
¾ cup of cranberries

Sift the flour with the baking powder, salt and powdered sugar. Beat the egg thoroughly. Add 2 tablespoons of milk. Add lemon juice. Cook the cranberries in a sugar syrup. Add to the fritter batter. Drop from a spoon into deep hot fat and when delicately browned, drain on unglazed paper. Dust with sifted powdered sugar. Can be served with additional cranberry sauce.

The fourth prize was awarded Miss Betty Dulin, Waterford, Va. The pudding is served with an abundance of cranberry sauce.

Cranberry Sponge Pudding.

Preparing the Prize-Winning Salad

Not all culinary honors are held by mothers Miss Clauda Philips, attractive daughter of Mr. Boyd Philips, demonstrates the right way to prepare the prize-winning recipe, Molded Cranberry and Celery Salad. Miss Philips is a student at McFarland Junior High.

Best Virginia Dish Will Win Award In Post's Recipe Contest Next Week

DO YOU consider yourself an F. F. V. or a descendant of one? Then you will be the first to boast of the fine art of cooking in your native State. Hidden in the old recipe books and scrap books of long ago are interesting Virginia dishes that need to be brought to the attention of Post readers.

Some of these dishes may read like one recipe discovered by Miss Adelaide Lewis, of Fairfax, Va., for green walnut pickles. It demanded continuous stirring for 29 days. Other recipes in her interesting "recent book" are marked "delicious" with a pencil. The edges of the pages are yellow and frayed. She is proud of these recipes and often makes them today. One of her favorites is caromel pudding, made with preserved damson plums.

If you have an interest in Virginia, then you will certainly want to take part in our contest. Any Virginia recipe is eligible. Modern versions of these old recipes have an equal chance. Virginia fried chicken, batter bread, beaten biscuits, Brunswick stew, syllabub and pound cake are only a few suggestions.

Write your entries clearly on one side of the paper only. Include your name and address. Address entries to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, and mail before November 13. The first prize is $3; the second prize, $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Pleasant Homes

Buying a rug is a serious proposition—especially for those of us who don't do it very often. For we must make ours last and be liked for a long time. Elizabeth MacRae Boykin gives a resume of rug fashions in her article tomorrow, stressing the highlights of color and motif, and giving some useful suggestions for buying a rug this season.

Canned Strained Foods Save Work for Mothers

Not so long ago mothers were forced to spend hours and hours in the preparation of strained foods for babies. For this reason often the valuable vegetables and fruits were delayed until a time when he could masticate them himself.

The introduction of a wide range of flavors and texture early in the diets of babies is now possible through the use of the canned strained foods. These vegetables are prepared under scientific conditions that preserve the maximum number of vitamins, minerals and food elements.

Ginger Grapefruit Is Variety Dessert

Fresh grapefruit, true-flavored, golden, and fresh-pickeled, is back with us again! Daily shipments are arriving here from Florida's finest groves, so take out your shopping list and mark down "fresh grapefruit." For variety try this new dessert combination.

Ginger Grapefruit.

Cut a thick layer off the top and one off the bottom of the grapefruit; cut off sections of peel from sides, cutting deep enough to remove all white membrane and to leave fruit exposed. With a sharp knife cut out each section separately. Fill individual sherbet glasses with grapefruit sections and juice. Add one teaspoon diced preserved ginger to each serving; sprinkle with one teaspoon shredded cocoanut; chill thoroughly and serve.

Brazil Nuts Used In Gingerbread

New Recipe Ideally Suited to Bridge Parties.

Long thin slivers of Brazil nuts, a new richly spiced recipe for gingerbread—and there you have the perfect dinner dessert, the ideal bridge-party refreshment and the children's favorite lunchbox treat. The spices in this recipe are proportioned to bring out an unusually aromatic flavor, and the addition of the nuts gives this ever-popular cake a new air of regality.

Brazil-nut Gingerbread.

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
2-3 cup molasses
¾ to 1 cup sour milk
¾ cup Brazil nuts, cut into long thin slivers

Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt, soda and spices. Take a tablespoon of these dry ingredients and mix it with the nuts. Cream the shortening, add the sugar gradually, creaming while adding. Stir in the well-beaten egg and molasses, and then the sour milk alternately with the mixture of dry ingredients. Add the nuts last. Pour into a well-greased baking pan or into cup cake tins, garnish the top with additional slivers of nuts, and bake in a moderate oven. The loaf will take about 50 minutes and the cup cakes about 20 minutes.

Can Fill Varied Roles in Week-end Meal Planning.

By Nancy Ellis.

FOR THE FIRST time in months the price of beef has decreased. This makes it of special interest this week-end to the housewife who finds it necessary to balance the food budget.

A roast of beef, browned carefully and served with browned potatoes and Frenched string beans, is the first choice for the week-end. The beef can be sliced neatly and served with pan gravy for the Sunday dinner, then served with a relish or chutney for Sunday night supper.

The standing rib roast, often called the prime roast, is the most choice cut. The delicate flavor and tender texture of this meat require careful watching during cooking. For the average family it is best to choose a three-rib roast, weighing between 6 and 8 pounds (the prime roast is composed of the entire 7 ribs and is too large for the average family). This roast should be wiped with a damp cloth and rubbed with salt and pepper before being placed in the roasting pan. Allow ¾ teaspoon of salt and ⅛ teaspoon of pepper to each pound. Place the roast fat side up in an uncovered roasting pan. As the roast cooks, the melted fat will baste the meat.

The temperature of the oven should be kept very low. A temperature between 300 and 325 is best. Allow 15 to 18 minutes per pound for a rare roast and 25 to 30 for a roast well done. If a brown crust is desired, place the roast under the broiler flame for 5 minutes before serving.

At some shops, the rib roast can be purchased boned and rolled ready for roasting. This makes serving more convenient. In cooking, allow between 7 and 10 minutes more per pound.

A rump roast is not so delicately flavored as the prime roast, but is more economical. If prepared properly, the flavor is very satisfying. The meat is cooked in much the same manner as the rib roast, but it must be basted from time to time to keep tender.

Serve the roast with squares of Yorkshire pudding.

Yorkshire Pudding.

1 cup of flour
1-3 teaspoon of salt
1 cup of milk
2 eggs

Mix and sift the flour and salt. Add the milk gradually to make a smooth paste. Then add the eggs and beat well. Cover the bottom of a 9x9-inch pan with about ¼ inch of fat fried from the roast. Pour the batter into the pans so that the layer will be about ½ inch thick. Put into an oven set at 450 degrees and bake for 25 minutes.

For Monday night serve the beef in a delicious meat pie. This recipe is for a one-dish meal the whole family will like and is quite simple to prepare.

Delicious Meat Pie.

5 potatoes
4 carrots
3 stalks of celery
2 onions
2 tablespoons of butter
3½ cups of cubed cold beef

Parboil the potatoes, carrots, diced celery in about 2 cups of water. Chop the onions and brown in butter. Add the cubed cold beef. Mix flour with two tablespoons of water and add to the stock in which was cooked the vegetables. Add salt and pepper. Combine all ingredients. Pour into a casserole and cover with baking powder biscuits. Bake at 400 degrees for 45 minutes.

Prime roast ribs of beef with browned potatoes makes the perfect fall dinner combination. To roast properly, set the oven at 300 degrees, place the meat fat side up in a roaster and cook without covering.

Current Market Offers Wealth Of Vegetables for Wise Buyer

Bargains Prevail in Cabbage, Cauliflower, Squash and Others; Several Types of Cheese in Wine or Brandy Available.

By The Post Food Editor.

THE MARKET this week offers a wealth of fall vegetables for the attention of smart buyers. Bargains prevail in such vegetables as cabbage, cauliflower, squash, brussel sprouts, spinach, turnip greens and yams. The new Idaho potatoes are on the market. Mushrooms are at their best. Cranberries are reasonable now, but the price may advance before Thanksgiving, so it might be wise to think ahead in making purchases. Certain vegetables such as green beans and peas are coming from the South at luxury prices, but of excellent quality. Cucumbers now are also shipped in.

Apples are abundant. Stayman Winesap is probably the best all-round apple. This apple has an excellent flavor and can be eaten raw or fried, baked or used in sauce. The York Imperial, a good cooking apple, and Stark's Delicious for decorating the table and for eating also can be had.

Pears and grapes are other fruits now at the height of their season. Seckel pears for stewing and spicing, Shelton pears and Bartletts for eating should not be overlooked.

Many different types of cheese are being featured for the fall cocktail parties and for desserts. Some of the new imports are in attractive pottery jars. This makes them ideal for spread-your-own canapes. Some of the dessert possibilities are Roquefort in old brandy, cheddar in port, edam in sauterne, gargonzola in old brandy, stilton in port, and cheshire in sauterne.

At the meat counter a good buy for the week-end is pork. Roast loin of pork is suggested. The price of beef has at last broken and a much higher quality product is on the market. Pot roast of beef is reasonably priced. Shoulder clod, al solid meat, can be sliced easily and has a good flavor. It is a good buy for the sour beef or New England pot roast which is now coming into favor. Dressed rabbits are available and suggest it is again time to enjoy the delicious German hasenpfeffer.

Country sausage and scrapple are two excellent breakfast dishes. At one shop a scrapple made with buckwheat was noticed. This has the advantage of not drying out during cooking. When you do your marketing, you will find fall flowers, bittersweet and fall leaves for your attractive table decorations.

Sausage, Waffles With Apple Butter November Dish

Link country sausage in natural casings made from lean, fresh pork and spiced to the queen's taste is a traditional and time honored November American dish.

This sausage should be pan broiled in very little water and cooked very slowly. Stick through the casings with a fork to facilitate the slow cooking. When almost done, pour off the liquid and let the sausage turn a golden brown—but don't crisp them.

Capital Dishes

Baklava With Walnut Paste Served at Turkish Embassy.

THE TEA at the Turkish Embassy was the outstanding event as observed by the food editor. Not only was the buffet spread with all of the usual delicacies served at afternoon parties but several native dishes were featured. One was the baklava, a Turkish pastry, made by baking thick walnut paste in a casing of puff paste. It was cut in squares and served from the shallow casserole with a rich honey sauce.

The other Turkish delicacy was Turkish lady fingers made of eclair dough shaped as lady fingers and dropped into deep fat and cooked to a golden brown. It seems that one secret of cooking is to cook them very slowly. They are light, tender and melt at first taste. Others on the table made from the same type dough were circular, with their pressed-in centers filled with whipped cream.

In the room across the hall, rare wines and champagne were served.

Cheese Flavoring.

Grated cheese can now be purchased in packages and in small cans ready for serving. Some of the cans are provided with shaker tops so that the cheese can be sprinkled lightly over the top of the casserole dishes just before baking. The cheese adds not only flavor but additional food value.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller.

Some of the diplomats, statesmen and other Washington celebrities have won so many decorations that they can wear a rosette in their lapel to match any suit they have on.

* * * *

* * * *

One Washington belle has already announced that if she sees any dresses on the Duchess of Windsor worth getting excited about she'll have her dressmaker whip her up some copies.

* * * *

It would have flattered the Duke to know how upset everyone was about the rumor that he might not come over after all to stare at shanties . . . His worst hecklers had lumps in their throats . . . Some won't sleep a wink until news comes that he has actually sailed.

* * * *

And shortly after that every Congressman's wife in town will be wearing a Duchess Wally number, even if it has to be a stylish stout version.

* * * *

"—a wolf among the Outs."

Nothing eases the revolutionary crisis so much as the news that socialites at an embassy supper ate "paper-thin" sandwiches.

"Our sandwiches are 3 inches thick!" says a Washington taxi driver: "Let 'em eat paper-thin sandwiches."

* * * *

Every Presidential Administration leaves its residue in Washington's population . . . The town is lush with granddaughters-in-law and grandnieces of Cabinet members of half a century ago, and of generals and admirals of vanished decades, or of recent outs.

* * * *

Thus the town's society is a series of layers like the rings in the trunk of an old tree . . . The inner rings may be nearer the heart of the tree, but the outer layers are nearer the surface, and a granddaughter of the Harding Cabinet eats more caviar than the current sprig of a President Polk brain-truster.

* * * *

But Washington society is dominated by the Outs and the Ex-es . . . For one things, Outs and Ex-es always have more time to devote to the exacting demands of social life.

* * * *

For another thing, the present crop of Outs and Ex-es assays a higher percentage of gold-plated cake-eaters, born to cocktail napkins and hollow-stemmed champagne glassware, than any collection of Outs since Jackson's day.

* * * *

But how they thrill to having a few of the New Deal wolves at their parties occasionally, and how a few of the lean, bright-eyed chromium-plated New Dealers dote on mingling with real plush economic royalists!

* * * *

Insurance companies ought to make special risk rates for Supreme Court justices . . . Few things make for longevity so certainly as a seat on the most exalted throne of justice.

* * * *

Even Chief Justice Taft, with his handicap of excess poundage and the strain of four years in the White House behind him, lived to a ripe 72.

* * * *

One reason is that they are protected against the usual contacts of public office by steel ramparts of tradition . . . Another is that they live exceedingly careful private lives, almost as if wrapped in cotton batting.

* * * *

It's difficult to imagine a Justice sitting in a draft, or going out without rubbers, muffler and umbrella, or overeating richly, or keeping late hours, or overgolfing, or dancing with a cutie, to the point of fatigue.

* * * *

Until the President loosed his icy and torrid blasts at them, they seemed to exist almost in a vacuum, delicate precision instruments of justice . . . If Mr. Roosevelt hadn't contributed a little to their occupational hazards and their blood pressure, we might some day have had a Bench whose youngest members were octogenarians.

Gas Kills Woman In Takoma Park

Mrs. John R. Kennedy, 63, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of her home, 109 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., late yesterday.

Her body was found by her daughter, Miss Virginia Kennedy, when she came home after spending the day in Washington. The Takoma Rescue Squad and Dr. Francis X. Richardson were called.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Kennedy, who was understood to have been in ill health, is survived by two other children, Lynn and Catherine Smith.

Barney Neighborhood House Celebrates Anniversary

Post Staff Photos.

The Barney Neighborhood House yesterday observed its thirty-sixth birthday with a program of dancing and dramatics to which those who use the house contributed time and talent. Above, Margaret Koehler, 17 (left), and Margaret Barghausen, 18, go through the dreamy rythms of a Spanish dance. Below, two of the cast of five who performed "The Cat and the Fiddle" are shown. Ellen Shannon, 11, is the cow which jumped over the moon, and Linda Harb, 11, is the cat with a real fiddle.

Mount Vernon School Marks Founder's Day

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Wife of Envoy to Russia, Receives Medal.

Mount Vernon Seminary held a birthday party yesterday. Unseen guest of honor was the late Elizabeth J. Somers, founder of the school and pioneer in the field of education, who was born November 5, 1837. Hundreds of alumnae from all parts of the country joined the school's faculty and student body in the celebration.

A service in the Elizabeth Somers Memorial Chapel at the school opened the all-day festivities. Principal speaker was Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president emeritus of Mount Holyoke College, whose topic was "That They May Have Life More Abundant." The present headmistress, Miss Jean Dean Cole, paid a tribute to Mrs. Somers, and two memorial tablets to her were unveiled.

Mrs. Davis Speaks.

Among those at the service was Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the Ambassador to Russia, who with nine other graduates was presented a bronze medal "for distinguished service to her alma mater." Mrs. Davies, a trustee of the school, was unable to attend the afternoon events because of ill health but was present at the banquet last night at the Mayflower Hotel, where she spoke briefly.

Announcement was made at the morning service of an endowment fund, started by alumnae last spring and already consisting of $163,000. The fund will be used for teachers' pensions and for scholarships.

In the afternoon the students played the leading role in the celebration. Dressed in costumes of each year since Mrs. Somers' birth, they filed down the stairway of the main building, past the audience of alumnae, in a colorful "Parade of the 100 Years." Mrs. Phila Calder Nye, of the class of 1891, represented Mrs. Somers in the pageant, wearing the same dress as that worn by the founder in her best-known portrait.

Birthday Cake Cut.

At the conclusion of the pageant, students and alumnae went to the dining hall, where a huge birthday cake trimmed with 101 candles was cut. "The extra candle is for the school to grow on next year," Miss Cole explained. The custom of cutting a cake on Mrs. Somers' birthday began years before her death. She always referred to the date the school's birthday rather than as her own.

Second performance of the "Parade of the 100 Years" opened the birthday banquet last night. After dinner another birthday cake was carried into the ballroom, and the 600 persons present joined in singing "Happy Birthday" to Mrs. Somers.

Seated at the head table with Miss Cole, who was mistress of ceremonies, were Mrs. Robert S. Riley, of Worcester, Mass.; Miss Grace Brouse, Miss Katherine E. Hill, John W. Guider and Judge Richard S. Whaley, of the United States Court of Claims, all of the board of trustees.

The speaker at the banquet was Mme. Olga Samaroff-Stokowski, former wife of Leopold Stokowski and a noted teacher. Discussing the topic "Music as a Social Force," she used statistics showing that inmates of penal institutions who attend music classes never break parole and gave other instances of the effect of music on morals.

Dr. Wooley Speaks.

Dr. Wooley also was at the speaker's table. Her address yesterday morning opened with a tribute to Mrs. Somers as combining "the daintiness and charm of the gentlewoman that she was, with the determination, persistence and courage of the pioneer."

"The critical day in which we live," she went on, "demands the contribution of women as well as the contribution of men." Quoting Olive Schreiner's statement that "Men have long been accustomed to make the best of what is; women live in endless hope that the future will be better than the present," she urged students and graduates to retain an optimistic attitude. She said:

"Repeatedly I have heard men say: 'War is atrocious, but—it always has been,' and women: 'War is atrocious and—it shall not be.'"

Women can help solve current problems, she believes, if they will train their minds to the highest efficiency. "The problems of the day are not easily solved," she concluded. "They demand the best thought of the best mind, not only among the leaders of our governments but also among our citizens, for public opinion in a democracy is a great power."

Barney Neighborhood House Conducts Birthday Funfest

The doors of Barney Neighborhood House at 470 N street southwest, were thrown open yesterday for celebration of the thirty-sixth anniversary of its founding.

Feature of the day was a program of dancing and music, prepared by a band of strolling players recruited from the House and staged at intervals through the afternoon and evening.

The Dance of the Jumping Jacks was performed by Mae Richards, 14, of 1339 Fourth street southwest, and Jean Lewis, 13, who lives at the Army War College. A tiny quartet—Dorothy Lou Twiford, 8; Jean Burley, 6; June Gartrell, 7, and Louise Greene, 9—staged a tap dancing number.

The familiar story of "The Cat and the Fiddle" was dramatized by five players in costume, including Linda Harb, 11, as the cow; Juanita Tonker, 10, as the dog; Dorothy Stevens, 11, and Addie Jones, 11, as the dish and the spoon, who climax the action by running away together. Only major character of the poem not dramatized was the fiddle. Ellen Shannon, 11, who played the cat, carried a real violin and used it to accompany her meows.

A Spanish dance by Margaret Koehler, 17, 53 S street northwest, and Margaret Barghausen, 18, 1730 A street southeast, was the final event on the program.

Throughout the day products of the various handicraft groups in the House were on display in classrooms. Following the evening program of dancing an art class was held under direction of J. P. S. Neligh, head of the arts and crafts department, and Marshall Adams.

Ager and Campbell Named to TVA Jobs

Tennessee Valley Authority announces the appointment of Paul W. Ager as acting comptroller and J. Ed Campbell as treasurer. Ager succeeds Frank J. Carr, who resigned late in October to become associated with the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Neither will have offices in Washington, but will come here frequently in official capacity. Ager will continue to serve as chief budget officer, a position he has held since last July. Prior to that time, he was assistant comptroller.

He was born in Worthington, Minn., on July 14, 1904, was graduated from the University of Oregon in 1926, with the degree of B. A., in economics. In 1932 he was awarded an M. A. in the same subject by the university.

Campbell was born on a farm in Meigs County, Tenn., and was associated with several private concerns before entering the TVA in August, 1933. First, he was with the personnel division, later wes promoted to chief of the community management section, and subsequent to this, was chief of the co-operative research and experiment division. The latter position was held for more than two years.

Auto Show Will Sell 600 Cars Worth $600,000, Officials Say

Sales from the floor at the automobile show will total not less than 600 cars for the 93 dealers exhibiting 22 makes of 1938 models, the management announced last night.

At an estimate daverage of $1,000 an automobile, these sales would bring $600,000 to the exhibitors. In addition, it was estimated that at least 1,000 prospects who will buy new cars before the show closes or within a few days afterward have been discovered since the show opened Monday.

The list included among other things a four-leaf clover, an NRA sticker, a Landon campaign button and a suit of long red flannel underwear.

First prize, an auto radio, was awarded to Sylvester Smith, of the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest. Miss Helen Christie, a visitor, received a home radio as second prize.

The show closes tonight at 11 o'clock.

Civic Battle On High Fare To Be Asked

Rehearing by Utility Commission Sought by Clayton.

Court Fight on Street Car Issue Hinted by Leaders.

The Federation of Citizens Associations tonight will be asked to support a move for a rehearing by the Public Utilities Commission of the Capital Transit Company fare case, William McK. Clayton, veteran chairman of the public utilities committee, said yesterday.

Clayton, who called on Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, also hinted that the fight might be carried to the courts should the commission refuse rehearing. The commission made no comment.

Sidney R. Katz, chairman of the civic affairs committee of the United Federal Workers of America, announced plans for a meeting of "key citizens" next Thursday at the Y. W. C. A., to crystallize opposition to the fare increase. Katz said that both C. I. O. and A. F. of L unions, citizens associations, fraternal organizations and consumers' groups will be invited to this meeting.

Act Called Unfair.

At a meeting last night at 532 Seventeenth street northwest the committee voted to ask the Public Utilities Commission to rescind its order for the fare increase pending the outcome of hearings by a special House committee headed by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, which is investigating the feasibility of 7-cent fares and abolition of one-man cars.

"For the commission to raise the fare while a Congressional committee is making an investigation," said Katz, "is unreasonable and unfair. If the company was impatient for action it could have gone to the courts. Now the action of the commission throws burden of proof on the public."

The Bayard Hills Civic Association in Montgomery County, Md., last night voted a protest against the increase and adopted a resolution condemning the manner in which the ruling was issued. It opposed any increase in fares.

Meanwhile, Representative Dirksen (Republicn), of Illinois, confirmed reports that the inquiry into the transit company's operations, started last session, will be resumed.

Dirksen Wants Inquiry.

Dirksen, the author of a bill to fix the maximum fare on street cars and buses in Washington at 7 cents and to prohibit one-man operation, in a telegram from his home, said:

"I fully intend to pursue the transit investigation to the limit, because I believe that the people of Washington are fully entitled to know what ramifications are and why the commission approved a fare increase.

"I have no other purpose than to explore the justification or lack of justification for such action, and if it develops that the action is unjustified it will be necessary to address ourselves to the public body that is expected and is duty-bound to protect the interests of the public."

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee, had previously stated he would resume the inquiry at the special November session of Congress.

Clayton Gives Reasons.

Clayton indicated that the basis of his appeal for a rehearig would be six-fold:

1. The commission failed to take direct evidence regarding the "poor service" rendered by the Capital Transit Co.
2. Use of one-man cars constitutes discrimination.
3. The minimum sale of six tokens, rather than three, he charges, was a direct result of the one-man operation of many street cars and all buses.
4. After three years of hearings before the commission, the transit company is providing "worse, rather than better, service."
5. The fare order carries no direction requiring the company to purchase new equipment, although it suggests it.
6. The transit company is substituting from time to time bus-to-street car service from the suburbs to downtown rather than straight-through rail service.

WPA Aide Urges More Children on Free Lunch Lists

A plea that more children be added to the free lunch list in the District schools was made to the Citizens' Permanent Committee yesterday by Mrs. Mary Steele, WPA official.

"This is distressing to the committee," Mrs. John Boyle, Jr., the chairman, said when making the announcement, "but we must hold the number to 5,000 until our campaign to raise funds is finished."

The committee is now in the midst of its campaign to raise $37,000 and to date has realized $28,000.

Maryland Offers Radio Diction Course

New Radio School at Md. U. To Teach Microphone Speech

Columbia System Collaborates With University in Project Opened With Speech by Dr. Byrd and Musical Program.

While H. C. Byrd, president, in an address, emphasized the obligation of a university to train its students to meet the requirements of the modern world, the University of Maryland yesterday dedicated its new Radio School, where students will be prepared for speaking to the microphone.

The school will be under the joint auspices of the university and the Columbia Broadcasting System, whose director of education, Stirling Fisher, came from New York to attend the dedicatory exercises in the auditorium of the Agriculture Building. These were broadcast over a network of 70 stations, and later rebroadcast from transcription by station WJSV to Washington audiences.

Music on Program.

The University Band and the glee club was assembled for the occasion and the program consisted of their music and brief addresses by President Byrd, Dr. Charles S. Richardson, head of the department of speech, Mr. Fisher and A. D. Willard, Washington representatives of the Columbia system, Dr. Ray Ehrensberger, assistant director of speech, served as the announcer.

Dr. Ricardson, under whose department and "speech clinic" the new school will operate, said that the dedication was "one of the high spots of my life." He recalled how more than 30 years ago he had launched the department with a class of nine students. Today the department has a faculty of six and more than 1,000 students.

Microphone Installed.

The microphone at which the students will be trained to talk has been installed in a studio in the Arts Building. Their speeches will not actually go on the air, but on occasion there will be a check-up with loud speakers on the campus.

A year's work in the speech classes, of which the microphone training will now be part, is required of all students enrolled in the liberal arts courses. By an arrangement with the broadcasting company, students who show exceptional talent at the microphone will be offered summer-time jobs as announcers, Dr. Ehrensberger said.

So many letters from adults, asking if they would be permitted to take the microphone training, have been received, Dr. Ehrensberger said, that the speech department is now considering the possibility of a night school for them.

Forum to Hear Scholar.

The Civic National Forum will be addressed by Dr. W. M. Johnston, theologian and scholar, at the Whitelaw Hotel, Thirteenth and T streets northwest, tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. on "Building Friendly Relations with Other Nations."

Gas, Theater Taxes Exempt From D.C. Levy

Assessor Allen's Ruling Ends Gross Receipts Controversy.

The local gasoline tax and the Federal levy on admissions to theaters and amusement places are the only excise taxes which may be deducted from the District's gross receipts tax, Assessor Fred D. Allen ruled yesterday in a formal order.

The ruling brought to an end a controversy over an interpretation of the business privilege tax title of the recent revenue act.

Deductions for various other excises were claimed on thousands of the returns filed last month in the assessor's office, and Allen F. Brooke, administrator of the business privilege tax, asked for a ruling. Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal decided that the question was one of fact rather than law and passed it along to the assessor.

Brooke said that the importer, wholesale dealer and retailer will be allowed to deduct the tax on gasoline. Theaters, amusement parks, concert halls and the like will be permitted to subtract their Federal admission taxes from their gross receipts.

Allen formally rejected pleas that deductions be allowed for excise taxes paid on tobacco, liquor, automobiles and other articles of trade.

Brooke is still engaged in checking up returns filed last month. He said it will be several weeks before he sends out a squad of investigators to force delinquents to obtain licenses and file returns.

Community Chest Receives 4 Gifts Totaling $14,500

Four gifts, totaling $14,500, swelled the coffers of the Community Chest last night in its tenth anniversary drive.

Foremost of these was a contribution of $10,000 from the Ambassador to Russia and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. The others were two of $2,000 from Mrs. Daniel Devore and an anonymous donor and one for $500 from Mrs. Harry S. Black.

Announcement of the gifts was made yesterday at a meeting of the special assignments unit at the Willard Hotel. The largest gift from firms during the day was that of the Potomac Electric Power Co., $15,000.

More than 600 persons held a dress rehearsal in Constitution Hall last night for the pageant which will open the campaign mass meeting Monday.

D. C. Board Denies Rail Auto Permit

Arlington & Fairfax Co. Told to Get I. C. C. Approval First.

Public Hearing Promised When Requirements Are Met.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday refused to act on an application to operate auto-railers in Washington until after the Interstate Commerce Commission has passed upon the right of the applicant to engage in interstate commerce.

Issuing a formal order on the petition of the Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co., the commission held that it would be "futile" for it to act until the I. C. C. sanctions the interstate operation.

The company applied first to the I. C. C., however, in the spring of 1936 and an inquiry was conducted by the joint board composed of representatives of the Public Utilities Commission and the Virginia State Corporation Commission, under I. C. C. supervision.

The board recommended against the issuance of a permit on the ground that the applicant had failed to establish convenience and necessity or financial ability. The I. C. C. subsequently issued an order returning the application, but the company withdrew before the order became effective.

"The commission, promptly upon the granting of authority to the applicant to engage in interstate commerce within the District of Columbia, or determination by competent authority that no authorization is required," the order stated, "will cause a public hearing to be held for the purpose of considering the matter of routing within the District."

Indications were that the Arlington & Fairfax Co. may carry the fight next to the courts and seek a mandamus to force the commission to assume jurisdiction.

Still All A-Sparkle, IreneBordoni Pays D. C. a Visit Again

Her costumes in a large trunk, her personal effects in a wardrobe suitcase and five handbags, her radio in a mauve hatbox, Irene Bordoni arrived in Washington yesterday for a week's engagement here at a night club.

Miss Bordoni's smile is still as bright, her French accent almost as pronounced as when she came to America 20 years ago. ("I was 18 then," she explained for the benefit of reporters, who were dying to ask but didn't quite dare.)

Her last appearance here was in "The Improper Duchess," which played the Belasco about five years ago. The play opened and closed its American run in Washington because "it was all about embassies and things and we thought Washington would like it. But they didn't," according to Miss Bodini.

She considers "Hitchey Coo" her first big hit. Her favorite song? "But there have been so many!" she protested with a roll of the eyes. She thinks her most popularr ones have been "Do It Again," from "The French Doll," and "Let's Do It," from "Paris."

Miss Bordoni will sing as much as anyone wants while she's here, but she's through with acting.

Arundell to Head Tax Appeal Board

Charles Rogers Arundell, a Republican, was elected chairman by the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday to succeed Eugene Black, a Texas Democrat.

Born in Washington, Arundell was appointed to the board September 1, 1925, by the late President Coolidge, his term to expire June 2, 1938. Before becoming associated with the Government, he practiced law in Oregon.

Black, a Representative from Texas during the sixty-fourth to seventieth Congresses, was appointed to the board by President Hoover October 21, 1929. Chairmen are elected at least biennially, board officials explained.

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1937 X ****

This Morning

Another Good One on the Big Train.

By Shirley Povich.

To borrow an expression, the Big Train hits 50 today. The passing years have removed Walter Perry Johnson from the baseball scene but time hasn't dimmed Washington's affection for the big fellow who for two decades enabled fans of the city to bask in the reflected glory of baseball's greatest pitching arm.

POVICH

Tonight, at the Mayflower Hotel, they're giving a party for Johnson on his fiftieth birthday—500 of his friends and admirers; but the theme of the affair is not simply to honor Johnson in the nakedness of his pitching feats but to offer a testimonial to Johnson the friendly character, whose head was never turned by his fame.

Never a bleat, never a complaint from Johnson during those years from 1907 to 1924, when the ex-farm boy from Idaho accumulated more heart breaking defeats than any other pitcher in the game. Never a squawk as he saw his mighty pitching betrayed by the worst set of big-league teammates ever assembled. Admiration and sympathy marked Washington's regard for the big pitcher.

* * * *

The stories of Johnson's tolerance with his errant teammates, his philosophic acceptance of undeserved defeat and his complete lack of haughtiness of manner could not be contained between the pages of this newspaper. But of them all, I like one best. It typifies the Walter Johnson they are honoring tonight. It will stand re-telling:

* * * *

* * * *

Gharrity cooled his heels against a lobby pillar while Johnson and the stranger meandered to the upholstery. There they sat and talked animatedly for minutes on end while Gharrity anxiously watched the clock, pointed to it, tried to motion Johnson to hurry along.

* * * *

For a half hour, Johnson and his new-found friend continued their conversation while Gharrity, in disgust, indicated to Johnson that they had missed the show. Finally, Johnson broke away from the fellow, after a long handshake, rejoined Gharrity and ran into a heap of abuse.

* * * *

"Whoinell was that guy?" Gharrity demanded. "Why did you let him buttonhole you like that. Now we've missed the show. You're a sucker for every half-baked fan who ever saw you pitch. What in the world were you talking about all this time. You went into a huddle with him like he was a long-lost brother, or something."

* * * *

"Yeah," said Johnson, "but this was different."

"Different? Whaddayamean?" asked Gharrity.

"Well, you see this fellow said he knew my sister out in Kansas. I had to be nice to him."

"You're sister? First time I ever knew you had a sister."

"Well," said Johnson calmly, "fact is I haven't."

* * * *

Johnsoniana.

Despite all the talk of the hop on his fast one, Johnson declares that he never saw his fast ball hop . . . the batter who gave him the most trouble was Shoeless Joe Jackson . . . admits that he always bore down a little bit harder against Ty Cobb and always tried to strike him out . . . because Cobb was always razzing him . . . both of his arms are abnormally long with his right arm an inch longer and his right shoulder correspondingly lower . . . Johnson's pitching motion was a cross between a side arm and an under-hand delivery . . . he delivered his pitch almost stiff-armed but got the full weight of his 195 pounds behind every heave . . . Trainer Mike Martin declares that Johnson was an artistic loafer on the pitching mound . . . meaning that Johnson bore down with all his speed only when he was forced to . . . the no-hit game he pitched against the Red Sox in Boston in 1920 was not the first for him . . . he had pitched a no-hit game years before but darkness halted it in the seventh inning . . . an error by Second Baseman Bucky Harris prevented Johnson's Boston no-hitter from becoming a perfect no-man-reach-first game . . . and a magnificent fielding play by Joe Judge saved the no-hit game in the ninth inning . . . Johnson began to prove he was no flash in the pan after holding the Tigers to a 3-2 win . . . in his second game in a Washington uniform, he shut out Cleveland with four hits . . . back in 1915, when the Nats met the White Sox 22 times, Johnson won nine games from the Chicago club . . . in the year he won 36 games and lost only seven, 1913, the opposition averaged only 1.09 earned runs per game, actually pitched several games with an iron brace on his foot after Joe Judge broke his leg with a line drive at Tampa in 1927 . . . Frank H. Young, Post baseball writer and remarkable double for Johnson in both size and facial appearance, used to sign Johnson's autograph by the dozen while Walter smilingly looked on from a distance.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 5.—Running as if he resented publicity given War Admiral, C. S. Howard's Seabiscuit came back to the races with one of his best performances today, setting a new track record and winning the twelfth running of the $10,000 added Riggs Handicap.

Forced to come from behind one of the fastest paces ever set over this track, the gallant son of Hard Tack refused to quit under the stinging whip of Jockey Red Pollard and dove for the wire a neck in advance of the Shannon Farm's Burning Star. A length behind came Caballero II, one-time South American champion, with J. A. Manfusco's Aneroid fourth and beaten less than two lengths for the first money.

War Admiral can thank his lucky Stars that he and his undefeated record were safely strapped in the Glen Riddle barn, for it is doubtful if an aerial photogrpah could have gotten him into the stretch picture in the sizzling battle of jockeys and horseflesh here this afternoon.

It was at War Admiral's Preakness distance, a mile and three-sixteenths, that Seabiscuit ran in 1:57 2-5, knocking three-fifths of a second off the mark held jointly by Gallant Knight and Dark Hope and a distance that has been a target for three-quarters of a century of the best horses of the nation.

Tribute to Trainer.

The race was a tribute to Trainer Tom Smith, who said that he would not send Seabiscuit to the post unless all conditions were right. And the colt was right today, under a perfectly timed ride by Jockey Pollard.

It was Seabiscuit's eleventh victory in 14 starts this year and his third straight, counting the dead heat at Laurel with Heelfly. His $10,025 earning today brought his year's total to $167,142, and nudges him closer to War Admiral.

By luck of the draw for post positions, Seabiscuit was teamed with Cabellero II in the betting and the combination running first and third, paid $2.80 to win. The crowd of 15,000 wagered $74,861 on the race and slightly under $400,000 for the program.

Despite the fact that Seabiscuit broke well, Pollard was content to keep him well into the pack on the trip to the club house turn. War Minstrel set the pace, just as he did in the War Admiral race here. As the field banked the turn, it was War Minstrel, Infantry, Chanceview, Aneroid and Seabiscuit.

Aneroid Challenges.

With the horses straightened on the back stretch, Pollard took Seabiscuit up gradually but Aneroid went along with him. At the far turn, Seabiscuit and Aneroid hooked up with first one head and then the other bobing in front as War Minstrel paid the penalty of too much useage and dropped back.

With Aneroid on the inside, the pair turned into the stretch. Charlie

Panthers Rated Choice to Beat Fighting Irish

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 5 (AP). Pittsburgh's potent contender for national gridiron honors and the awakened Irish of Notre Dame will collide tomorrow in the final game of their modern series probably before a sellout crowd of 56,000.

On the basis of their season's records, the Panthers, undefeated but held to a scoreless tie by Fordham, rate the edge. The Irish, however, will be out there for a desperate effort to square accounts for last year's 26 to 0 trouncing at Pittsburgh. The Irish boast no such power as Pitt's running attack, built around the sensational Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, has generated this year, but expect to score and hope their defense, sensational in the last half of the Navy game and throughout last week's battle at Minnesota, can stop the Panthers.

Wilson Ties Western, 6-6, In Big Upset

By Jack Munhall.

An inspired Wilson eleven produced the biggest upset of the interhigh football series yesterday battling heavier Western to a 6-6 deadlock in Western Stadium where 2,000 persons braved chilling winds, but were rewarded with one of the wildest melees of the season.

Aided by the high winds and vicious tackling which caused innumerable bobbles, the ball changed hands so often and suddenly that the linesmen resembled a relay team as they dashed up and down the sidelines in an effort to keep pace. The uncertain air conditions also hindered passing and each team made several interceptions and returned the ball for sizeable gains.

The game was highly reminiscent of the Wilson-Western meeting last year when the Presidents' first football team made a name for the school with a stunning 13-12 victory over the Westerners who had a stronger team than the current edition. And the hero of last year's surprise, Johnny Stevens, trim end, was one of the chief instigators of the plot that undermined Western yesterday. Stevens was a real end, catching passes with seemingly unbelievable skill, blocking with emphasis, tackling with certainty and generally proving himself a pest to Western.

Wilson Team Improved.

Wilson presented a vastly improved outfit, tribute to the coaching prowess of Carl Heintel. It played smart, aggressive football throughout, fighting at every turn and taking advantage of any breaks which came its way.

Western looked the same.

When Morris Snead, triple-threat quarterback, grabbed the ball and scooted, Western was great. But Snead received less blocking than a movie reporter's hat and was never able to break away. Larry Stanton and Tom O'Hanlon, Western's fine ends, were outstanding. Each blocked and then recovered a Wilson kick in addition to repelling most of the plays aimed in their direction.

Wilson swept into the lead early in the first quarter, when a beautiful 50-yard kick by Center Andy McBride set Western deep into its own territory, because Stevens downed the rolling punt on the Western 22.

After a 15-yard holding penalty set Western back on the 7, Snead kicked out to Dave Maloney, Wilson safety, who scrambled back to the Western 35 before stopped. Three running plays netted Wilson only 5 yards, but on the fourth down Stevens made a one-hand grab of a shovel pass shot by Maloney and stumbled to a first down on the 4-yard stripe.

Today's Games Offer Chance to Underdogs

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 5.—Tomorrow's football festivities offer striking opportunities for the collegiate underdogs to chew large chunks out of the title hopes of pace-setting favorites.

It's the spot in other words, where overconfidence or any letdown from the effects of a hard championship drive may lead to disaster for some of the top-ranking teams.

All but three of the current "top ten" on the national ranking list encounter opponents who have either been subjected to rough treatment already or are going nowhere in particular.

The exceptions comprise Pittsburgh's unbeaten Panthers, who collide with Notre Dame's fighting Irish before a capacity 56,000 at South Bend; Fordham, which entertains another rugged rival in Purdue, and Ohio State, challenged by Indiana's hustling Hoosiers.

Lest we imply the others are in relative "soft spots," take the case of California, so far the Nation's No. 1 team by something approaching the acclamation of sports experts. The Golden Bears figure to beat Washington handily but the Huskies are in a typically fine underdog spot. They are out of the conference and Rose Bowl race that they dominated last year so they can shoot the works.

Opponents of such other undefeated top-notchers as Alabama, Baylor, Nebraska, Yale and Dartmouth also can let themselves go, without feeling either restrained or self-conscious.

Notre Dame-Pittsburgh (56,000)—It's the same Notre Dame team that was tied in October by Illinois and beaten by Carnegie but the fighting Irish have been acting like eleven other fellows lately. With both pointing for this one, it should be close and may be rough, but an "Irish hunch" isn't strong enough to offset "Panther power." Pittsburgh.

Fordham-Purdue (40,000)—The Boilermakers from Indiana may hear the Anvil Chorus. The defense that has yielded only six points this season looks good enough to stop Cecil Isabell & Co. Fordham.

Manhattan-Detroit (15,000)—Even without Farkas, it's Detroit.

Temple-Michigan State (20,000)—Past performances indicate there's a 50-50 chance of another tie here. They deadlocked 7-7 last year and Temple has played three scoreless ties this season. Michigan State.

Sectional Headliners.

Harvard-Army (55,000)—After fattening on Tiger meat, Harvard is hunting bigger game this week with better than an outside chance of making another "kill." But the Cadet forwards, at full strength, may be bad news for Vernon Struck & Co. Army.

Dartmouth Favored.

Princeton-Dartmouth (30,000)—This may prove whether Princeton has given the game completely back to the boys. Dartmouth.

Ohio State-Indiana (50,000)—The Big Ten standout. Bo McMillin's

Georgetown Prep Beaten By Gonzaga

By Bob Garrison.

Playing under wraps but by no means under their usual standard of efficiency Orrel Mitchell's Purple Passers from Gonzaga High School gained first place as the Catholic Prep School League opened yesterday, on the Gonzaga Field, by blanketing their parochial opponent, Georgetown Prep, under a 32-6 score.

Although second and third-string performers were inserted freely, it was hardly noticeable to the 1,000 spectators as substitutes battled earnestly to earn starting positions in the St. John's game, annual classic Saturday week, the nearness of which excused the full-time service of Gonzaga regulars.

Scoring in each period, the North Capitol street boys, who have been defeated but once this year, were ever in command of the situation, allowing but one goal, while the backs were reeling off long gains at will and completely dominating the play. Jim Ellis, Purple fullback and leading scorer, added two touchdowns to his record when he crossed the goal line in the first and final quarters.

Ellis Scores First.

Four minutes after the opening kick-off, Ellis registered his first when he crossed from the 4-yard line, following a Gonzaga march from its own 40, in five plays. And closed the scoring for the day by intercepting a pass in the closing minutes of the game and dashing 15 yards for the score.

Aiding Ellis in mounting the score against the heavy Little Hoyas, who never seemed to get started, were 15-year-old Jackie Walch, Lou DeFilipo, Jesse Mann and Bill Rapp. Each accounted for one goal, Rapp's coming after the longest run of the game, a 60-yard end run, early in the third period.

Georgetown appeared to be, offensively, a one-man team, Capt. Ed Cummings, standing out as the sole runner able to penetrate the Gonzaga defense. It was his 50-yard dash through the entire Gonzaga team in the third period, after he had taken a lateral from Bob Boylan at the scrimmage line that gave the Garrett Park team its only touchdown.

Sampson Thwarts Whitewash of Team

Speedy Little Halfback Passes and Runs Ball Deep Into Ole Miss Territory in Third Quarter; Hall, Kincaid and Kinard Star.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A butter-fingered, bungling George Washington eleven that could do nothing right dropped a 27-6 decision to a velvety smooth Mississippi team last night before an audience of approximately 12,000 fans.

While the Colonials' attack smoked and sputtered like a cold motor, Mississippi, on the other hand, could do nothing wrong. Everything attempted by the Rebels, who apparently didn't give a copper's damn for orthodox football, was successful.

George Washington fumbled frequently and was penalized even more, and Mississippi alertly snapped up every advantage thrust its way. Vic Sampson, who gained virtually every foot of yardage credited to his team, was the lone figure on G. W.'s side of the line who even faintly resembled a football player. The others were in uniform, but they were of little help.

Mississippi, however, had Ray Hapes, Kent Massengale, Parker Hall and Bill Frye, all apparently of equal merit, to carry the mail, and a big, powerful line headed by Frank Kinard to open up holes for them. It proved to be an unbeatable combination—as George Washington soon discovered.

Colonials Offer Threat.

George Washington seemed to have taken a hitch in its belt and was beginning to fight back when the first of a series of bad breaks put it back on its heels. The Colonials started from their own 20-yard line after Parker Hall punted into the end zone and they swiftly moved it out to the 33 on a pass from Joey Kaufman to Jay Turner. Kaufman faded back for another, but the ball settled in the arms of Hall, who sprinted 35 yards for a touchdown behind a curtain of perfect interference. Harvey Murphy took out Kaufman to make straight the runner's pathway. Kinard added the extra point.

It was Kaufman again who paved the way for Mississippi's second score, but the fault was not entirely Joey's. He fumbled a bad pass from center, and Bill Williams recovered for the Rebels on George Washington's 32. From that point it was just like walking tround the block for the visitors. Hall passed to Ray Hapes for a first down on the 21 before the latter circled end for 16 more. Lehnhardt bucked his way across from the 5-yard line on three tries. Kinard's attempted placement was fumbled.

But Mississippi had still another scoring bomb to explode in the Colonials' dismayed faces, and it was another fumble that opened the door, but this time Mississippi played smart ball in recovering. Hall's punt slipped through Mahan's fingers, and as he went to retrieve it, Jack Ward blocked his way, enabling a running mate to recover.

Ole Miss Away.

From that point, G. W.'s 32-yard line, Ole Miss bucked its way down to the 23 before Hall passed to Kincade in the end zone for the third touchdown. Kinard added the extra point and it was 20-0, Mississippi.

Paced by little Vic Sampson, who displayed more willingness and ability than all the other Colonials combined, George Washington worked the ball down to Mississippi's 18-yard line early in the third period, but it was a futile gesture. The Ole Miss line held like adhesive tape and Sampson's passes either were batted down or dropped far beyond the intended receiver.

The game's complexion changed instantly as Hall slipped around a mob of players and streaked 60 yards down the sidelines to George Washington's 21-yard line, where Sampson finally pushed him out of bounds. But the Rebels got no farther, for the downtown school repulsed this threat with new-found defensive power.

George Washington's touchdown drive started as innocently as a summer breeze from the Colonials' 29-yard line, where they took the ball after interrupting one of the visitors' numerous forays into their territory. Engineering the drive and carrying the brunt of the burden was little Vic Sampson.

All he did was reel off two short runs totaling 31 yards, throw two passes to Bob Nowaskey for 22 more, and finally throw another pass to Bob Faris for the touchdown. Faris made a beautiful finger-tip catch, landing squarely on his nose. It was the best catch seen in ball park since Bucky Harris took Ossie Bluege off third base.

Mississippi cashed in on another intercepted pass late in the final period to register its fourth score of the evening. Frank Hart grabbed Sampson's pass intended for Carroll, giving his team the ball at midfield. Then, with Massengale leading the attack, the Rebels dogged their way to the 27-yard line before Massengale passed to Kincaid, who ran about 3 yards for the touchdown. Massengale drop-kicked the extra point. Mississippi missed two additional scoring chances, one of which ended on the 8-yard line and another on the 16.

College Park, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—The University of Maryland's freshman football team ran roughshod over Western Maryland's freshmen today, 19-0, but lost the services of Frank Dwyer, star end for the Baby Terrapins.

Dwyer suffered a compound fracture of the right arm while attempting to block a Western Maryland power play, and will be out for the remainder of the season.

Cardinals Meet Bobcats, Hoyas Battle Mountaineers Here Today

Georgetown Is Underdog At Stadium

In pretty much the same mental and physical condition as a preliminary boy meeting the world's heavyweight champion, Georgetown's crippled and battered gridmen meet West Virginia's powerful machine this afternoon at Griffith Stadium starting at 2:30 o'clock.

West Virginia, on the strength of its season record in general, and that 64-0 pasting it handed Western Maryland last week, is a prohibitive favorite. But Georgetown, undaunted by a series of mishaps and mistakes, is going into battle hopeful of landing one wild knockout punch. It figures to be that kind of a game.

Coming here with five victories against one defeat, and that administered by Pittsburgh in the first game of the season, the Mountaineers have one of their best teams in years. Their backs are fast and shifty, the line heavy and able to get about, and their scoring weapons varied. Pittsburgh is the only team to stop West Virginia's aerial attack, and that seems to be the key to victory.

Moan Is the Man.

Kelly Moan, who was well covered last autumn as Georgetown chalked up a 28-to-0 victory at Morgantown, and Harry Clark, reputedly as good as Kelly, are the lads to watch this afternoon. Clark is one of the Nation's leading scorers. The pair can do about everything expected of a back, and well enough to keep the Hoyas on their collective toes throughout the afternoon.

West Virginia's forward wall averages 191 pounds, with massive Dick Dolly, 204-pound end, probably the outstanding player. Bill Hodges, 205-pound left tackle, and "Turk" Atty., 200-pound left guard, are two others whose presence in the line-up is not calculated to aid Georgetown. Heading the cast is Coach "Little Sleepy" Glenn, himself a former West Virginia all-around star, now serving his first year at the helm.

Hagerty Has New Plays.

In mapping an offense to stop the fast-moving visitors, Head Coach Jack Hagerty is banking on speed and a pack of new passing plays. Tommy Keating, capable little field general, will be the key man in the attack and will be hard to stop if he does as well today as he did against Manhattan last week.

Joe Mellendick, a slim sophomore, also will handle a large share of Georgetown's offensive burden, having been selected for heavy duty in lugging the ball. Mellendick is without doubt the fastest man on the squad, and once in the open is hard to bring down.

and Quarterback Al Bernstein slammed through right guard for the touchdown. Dick Mesrobian dropped back from his tackle position to attempt the point that would have given his team victory, but his placement was wide by at least 10 feet.

Wilson was again knocking at the Western goal line when the half halted what appeared to be a certain score. The drive started when McBride grabbed Snead's fumble, while the ball was still in the air, and raced to the Western 30. Bill Leach, stubby fullback, passed to Stevens for a first down on the Western 14 and then a shovel pass, Maloney to Stevens, produced another first down on the 4. But after Leach gained 2 yards off-tackle the gun sounded the end of the threat.

Western was a changed team after the intermission. Led by battering Snead, who gained consistently, the big, Red eleven marched deep into Wilson territory several times, but always the gallant President line arose to quell the uprisings. However, in the fourth quarter Western finally clicked.

Snead returned a kick by McBride to the Wilson 48, and from there Western swept down the field in great style. It was Snead running the ball on almost every play and Western chalked up three straight first downs before it encountered any trouble.

After three plays were stopped on the 16, Dickie Lynham faded back and whipped a neat pass to Stanton, who caught the ball on the goal line and fell over when Barbee hit him from behind. Lynham's try from placement was a poor effort. The ball dribbled off his foot and bounced along the ground, hardly rolling 10 yards.

Montgomery, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—New River State slammed across for two touchdowns in the first half against Bridgewater College, of Virginia, today and then coasted through with substitutes to win, 12 to 0.

U.S. Defeated In National Horse Show

Canadians Win Low School Challenge by One Point.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 5.—Coming back with a brilliant exhibition of horsemanship, the Canadian army officers tonight wo nthe International Low School Challenge Trophy for the first time at the National Horse Show, nosing out the United States by the slim margin of one point.

The Canadians, going in the last of the three-night competition trailing Uncle Sam's forces by three points, were charged with only eight faults for a low score aggregate of 27 points. The three American officers piled up 12 faults for a total of 28 errors and thus lost the chance to retire the trophy presented by President Arturo Allesandri of Chile, which they won in 1934 and 1935.

Tonight's competition, witnessed by a near capacity crowd of 12,000, called for each country to send three horses in single file over the eight difficult jumps. The Cleland brothers, Lieuts. Marshall and Douglas, gave perfect performances for the Canadians with Roxana and Flying Poet, but Lady Jane, handled by Col. R. S. Timmis, bowled over two fences.

That did not appear good enough to win, especially in view of the fine performance shown by the United States officers and their mounts on the first two nights. King Hi, Dakota and Renzo, ridden by Capt. Royce A. Drake and Lieuts. Franklin Wing and W. H. S. Wright, respectively, were not equal to the task, however.

King Hi, and Renzo knocked over the second jump, a 4 feet 9 inch barrier, and the usually reliable Dakota made a mess of one of the 5-foot obstacles, which spelled defeat for the Americans.

In between the Canadians and United States the Belgians matched the winner's score for tonight, but finished third with a total of 31½. Then came the Irish with 41½, 20 of which were made tonight. The Dutch were eliminated for the second time in the three nights and finished far back.

Mrs. Loula Long Combs, Kansas City, Mo., sportswoman, who spends the fortune she inherited from lumber on horses, mules, dogs and cattle, personally took charge today, as she pulled away from her Midwestern rivals in the blue ribbon battle.

While Eastern-owned stables rallied to regain some of the prestige they lost yesterday, Mrs. Combs continued her winning streak, accounting for two events to run her total to seven out of nine classes in which she had entries.

Alternating with her stable manager, Dave Smith, in handling her highly bred charges, the daughter of the late R. A. Long scored today with Admiration and the undefeated team of Admiration and Adulation. Mrs. Combs won the class for single harness horses which had not won more than six firsts, with Admiration, and Smith piloted the pair to the front in the event for teams over 14.2 hands and not exceeding 15.2.

Terps Play V.M.I. in Lexington

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Nov.—A pair of toss-up football games, Maryland-V. M. I. at 11 a. m. and Virginia-Washington and Lee at 2 p. m. will climax the homecoming festivities of historic Lexington's two colleges tomorrow.

Pep rallies, dances, fraternity open houses and general old grad hilarity lent a gay atmosphere tonight to the white-columned buildings of Washington and Lee and the stern, cannon-flanked barracks of V. M. I. But beneath it all ran a current of tenseness in anticipation of the double bill between evenly-matched elevens.

V. M. I. was given an edge in the backfield where Sophomore Paul Shu will be seeking to score in his eighth consecutive game. Rounding out the formidable Keydet quartet are Billy Roberson and Andy Trzeciak, dangerous triple-threaters, and Bud Kovar, one of the State's best blockers.

Maryland has outstanding backs in Jim Meade and Charlie Weidinger and appears to have the best balanced line, especially in the important matter of reserves.

Comparison Favors Cadets.

Weidinger's field goal beat Virginia, 3-0, while the Cadets trounced the Cavaliers, 26-7, to furnish the only basis for direct comparison. Although V. M. I. is deadlocked with Duke for the lead in the Southern Conference race, the Keydets' record shows no such potent victims as Syracuse or Florida, beaten by the Old Liners in the past two weeks.

Coach Allison (Pooley Hubert, of V. M. I., said on the eve of battle that "we expect to shoot everything we have. We expect Maryland to be the touchest team we have met next to Army. Army beat us on passes and our aim is to perfect a defense against Charlie Weidinger's passes."

Frank Dobson, crafty Maryland mentor, stopping overnight with his squad at nearby Staunton, was noncommittal as usual, but he pointed out that he had not been able to point his defense at stopping any one V. M. I. back. "You have to watch the entire quartet, both as passers and runners," he said.

Aerial Battle Seen.

Indications were that the W. and L.-Virginia battle would be fought in the air with the decision going to the most accurate bombers. The Generals were heartened by the return of Frank Jones and Bill Borries, ends, from a long stay on the injury list, and were confident of making it seven triumphs in a row over an equally optimistic band of Cavaliers.

Coach Frank Murray said if the Cavaliers can hold the drive they have shown in practice this week his charges may overcome "manpower disadvantage" against W. and L.

Christofer Beats St. Alban's, 20 to 0

Unleashing a bevy of hard-driving backs, St. Christofer's of Baltimore, swamped St. Alban's eleven, 20-0, yesterday on the St. Alban's field.

The visitors scored once each in the first, third and final periods on sustained drives of 50, 40 and 65 yards. Knowles tallied the first touchdown on an 8-yard center rush. Bradley added the point from placement. The second touchdown was scored by Bradley on a tackle smash from the 3-yard stripe and the third was registered by Moore, sub, on a plunge from the same point. Knowles made the final point from placement.

Navy's Guns Are Set For Lion Hunt Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5.—The football teams of the Navy and Columbia engage here tomorrow in the seventh game between Sailors and Lions, the series standing at present four to two in favor of the latter.

During the week, the thought of Sid Luckman and his canny passing arm has dominated the practice, and Head Coach Hank Hardwick has not hesitated to say that the Navy's chances of victory lie in its ability to curtail these plays.

The Navy will also try to hold the ball as much as possible to keep it out of Luckman's hands and to that end, the offense, led by Lem Cooke and Emmett Wood, backfield finds of the present season, has been polished up greatly.

Navy people believe that they have real aces in these two youngsters and that they are improving with every game. The backfield will be completed by two big fellows, Art Franks, 200-pounder, who is the third underclass man to make a regular backfield job this season, and Bob Antrim. Antrim is the only senior in a backfield which started the season with every member in that class.

The Navy is setting great store by its powerful tackles, Al Bergner and Frank Lynch. Bergner, a plebe last year, weighs 215 pounds and is officially the strongest man in the Naval Academy. Lynch, standing 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 220 pounds and is particularly fast and likely to help the ends bother.

The Navy squad had its final practice this afternoon in Thompson Stadium, continuing its work on pass defense and attack formations. The Columbia squad, under Coach Lou Little, reached Baltimore about noon and practiced this afternoon at Homewood, the grounds of Johns Hopkins. The visitors will reach Annapolis about 12:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Navy practice this afternoon was attended by a large section of cheering midshipmen, accompanied by the Academy band, and the pep rally was continued this evening after supper around an immense bonfire.

Catholic U. Gridders Will Tackle Wesleyan

Catholic University's gridmen abandon their roles of gentlemen of leisure this afternoon, returning to the pigskin wars in a game with West Virginia Wesleyan scheduled fo 2:30 o'clock in the Brookland bowl.

Although lacking an impressive record, the Bobcats are not wanting for talent, or so it seemed yesterday when they limbered up in preparation for the contest. They look big and talented enough to repeat last year's thrilling victory over the Cardinals.

Albie Coleman, the latest in a long line of flashy backs developed at the West Virginia school, is the visitors' outstanding offensive threat. He appeared here earlier in the season against George Washington and on that occasion got off several 50-yard punts in addition to handling his other assignments with All-America skill. Coleman will not be in the starting lineup, but is scheduled to see service as soon as his mates get within striking distance of the goal line.

Other than Coleman, considered Wesleyan's greatest star since Cliff Battles, the Bobcats boast fine backfield men in Jack LaBay, blocking quarterback, and Carl Weber, a shifty halfback. On the line, George Mike, Frank Ciccone, Kenny Moore and Ash Broadwater are the tops.

Broadwater was the unsung hero of the Bobcats' stunning victory over Duquesne last year, after the Dukes had knocked off Pittsburgh, tackling a Duquesne back in the end zone for the winning safety. Broadwater never received official recognition for the play.

In an effort to obtain the maximum results from his meager supply of talent, Bergman yesterday announced three changes in his starting lineup, with Joe (Wahoo) Cuyon slated to replace Rocco Pirro at fullback. Joe Bunsa takes over Al Calabrese's left end assignment, and Eddie White gets Frank Cairo's right tackle berth.

Guyon, in this arrangement, will do the punting and will be called upon to match the kicking of Coleman or Mackey. The remainder of the lineup will be the same that started against St. Louis two weeks ago. Katalin as tackle, Sabo and Sochon, guards; Ambrose, center; Kasunich, end; Munhall, quarter; Vidnovic and Carroll, halves.

Post Notes On Fishing

By Bill Ackerman.

Back as far as we can remember there is not a season in which the interest of anglers has held on as it has this fall. The heavy rains and the subsequent almost flood stages of the rivers stopped the bass fishing most effectively, and the high winds, mostly easterly, kept the rockfish from rising for days at a time, but the ardor of the bay fishermen remains at the same feverish heat. They are ready any day it seems possible to get out with anything like reasonable comfort.

ACKERMAN.

The reason is probably that many have tasted, for the first time this year, the sweetness of a large striper on the end of a line, and have liked it. So much, that it looks as if the old-timers that never took their rockfishing seriously until November and December, will from now on have plenty of company.

Flood conditions in many sections of the upper Potomac watershed have the river riled pretty badly between Washington and Harpers Ferry and over most of the Shenandoah, but at every point the waters are back in their banks and with no more rain should be fishable in the next five or six days. The temperature is down low enough to make them clear fast.

* * * *

In the meantime try some of the creeks below Washington, but far enough up to get clear of the muddy water. Piscataway and Gunston are a little too open and with a high tide the river waters overbalance those of the creeks, but at Matawoman there are almost 2 miles of good water with an efficient screen of eel grass and hyacinths that keeps the water clear. At Sweden Point where boats may be had, you can also get directions, but even that isn't necessary, just follow the creek up to the stacks.

Or how would a little jaunt after pickerel serve to pass this muddy interim? Few ponds in southern Maryland that doesn't have this hard-striking fish; and even closer than that the Severn above Annapolis; South River from the second bridge to the Defense Highway; and North River wherever it can be fished.

* * * *

On these last two, boats are hard to obtain far up where the best fishing is, but if the deep coves are fished it is possible to get them as far down as the Marlboro Pike Bridge, where boats are to be had from Capt. George Parks, and information, too, if you think it is necessary.

It hasn't been many days since we saw a string of 15, fat and in perfect condition, and everyone from 16 to 18 inches in length.

The perch fishing at Piges Point on the Patuxent is out, and will continue so for another week at least, due to the muddy waters. This is also a good place for pike, but the water has this fishing stopped also. Farther down is another story—any deep hole near the bank, or middle-ground lump, from Broomes to St. Leonards will be productive.

* * * *

According to a few statistics, culled from Frank Bell, Commissioner Bureau of Fisheries, the ladies are taking to the streams in a way that will shortly make the men sit up and take notice.

Twenty-eight per cent more women and children purchased fishing licenses in 1935-36 than in 1934-35—80,241 were issued for that period as against 62,517 in 1934-35.

Nonresident wives in Michigan purchased 36,779, resident women and children in Massachusetts, 13,476, and in Utah, 9,914, while resident women in West Virginia purchased 8,757 combination hunting and fishing licenses; resident and nonresident women accounted for 261 licenses in Connecticut, nonresident children in Maine, 2,386; in Massachusetts, 78, while in Oregon, resident and nonresident children bought 8,590.

Two States reported they had women game wardens and educational courses relative to fishing were reported in a number of colleges and institutions of higher learning, including Stone Laboratory, Ohio; Penn State College, with the University of New Hampshire and the University of Maryland, considering such courses. Streams have been set aside for fly fishing only in the States of Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont and West Virginia, with Maryland taking this forward step in 1938 (supposed to have started on Hunting Creek in Frederick County last spring—as far as we know, nothing has been done about it yet). If any other States have such streams they have not reported it to the Bureau of Fisheries. A number of States have streams or portions of streams for the exclusive use of the women and children anglers.

One of the most enlightening developments in the study of our anglers is that the maximum average daily creel reported by any one of the 48 States was 60 per cent of the daily limit.

Also, in 29 of the 48 States in 1935-36, there were 6,009 fish and game clubs—in 1934-35 there were but 3,497 fish and game clubs reported in 26 States—a 50 per cent increase in consolidated memberships of those interested in conservation work. What proportion of members of these new clubs is recruited from the 711,128 newly licensed anglers in 1935-36 would be difficult to ascertain, however, it does indicate what a real opportunity there is to put fish and game work on a financial balance basis.

Blues Battle Washington C. In Maryland

Gallaudet Is Seeking Second Victory of Season Today.

Fresh from a two-week layoff that followed its first victory of the year, Gallaudet's fast improving football team entrains for Chestertown, Md., today, to renew athletic relations with Washington College after a three-year lapse.

The Kendall Green eleven will be gunning for its second victory of the year to balance the losses which have reached the same number. Coach Turk Tobin has been erasing several glaring errors that cropped up in the Wilson game, which was won by Gallaudet, during the past two weeks and believes he has hit upon a winning combination.

Muggsy Wolach, halfback, who has been on the injury list since the William and Mary game at Norfolk, and Will Rogers, fullback, who also has been on the shelf, have returned to the line-up and have added considerable strength to the offense. Rogers' services will have to be spared full duty, however, as his cracked ribs have not yet completely healed.

Although Washington College is reputedly weaker than in many years, the Blues will face a team that appears to be improving gradually. Susquehanna College was bowled over last week by the score of 27-0, which was largely due to the stellar performance of one back, Walter Young, whom the Blues must stop if they are to win.

Woodberry Wins Over Severn, 12-0

Menow Withdrawn From Field in $15,000 Pimlico Futurity Today

Young Star Is Retired By Headley

By a Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Nov. 5.—Hopes of the Hilltop officials to make tomorrow's Pimlico Futurity a championship race were struck a hard blow today when it was revealed that Hal Price Headley's Menow, the War Admiral of the juvenile ranks, is injured and will have to be retired for the season. The colt, winner of $67,825, was not entered due to a badly cut leg, suffered when he struck himself last Wednesday.

Trainer Duval Headley kept the injury a secret, believing that it would sufficiently heal to allow the son of Pharamond II to compete in the classic. However, Owner Headley arrived this morning from Kentucky and upon examining the colt ordered his entry withheld. He explained that he did not want to gamble with Menow's three-year-old career by starting him.

Menow, out of the mare Alcibiades, was bred at Headley's Belmont stud near Lexington, Ky., and was slow to come to best form. After winning a maiden race he was out of the money in the Arlington Futurity. However, at Saratoga he began to improve, reaching his peak at Belmont, where he won the Champagne Stakes and the Belmont Futurity. Menow set a world record for six and a half furlongs on the straightaway in winning the Futurity in 1:15 1-5.

While many turf fans would like to have seen Menow in action, the absence of the great colt will make the race more interesting from the standpoint of competition. A field of nine was named overnight, with three entries appearing.

Mrs. E. Friendly's Jacola, trained by Selby Burch, of Washington, probably will be the favorite in the $15,000 battle of a mile and a sixteenth. Jacola has improved steadily and reached top form at Laurel, winning the Selima Stakes. The W. S. Kilmer entry of Nedayr and Sun Alexandria will have a strong backing. Both were stake winners at the other track.

With Menow in the barn, the Headley colors will be represented by Bourbon King, winner of $11,235 this year, and Dah He. The last C. V. Whitney entry to march postward before the auction sale on Monday will be that of The Chief and Dauber, beaten here early in the week. Both won stakes in New York. T. B. Martin's Galapas was a late entry and was shipped in today from New York.

Boxing War Subsides in Armistice

By Jack Paulus.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The town's latest boxing war fizzled into a powder-puff barrage last night. What threatened to become a major conflict between Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn and Gabe Menendez, manager of Howard "Cowboy" Scott, died in a mutual armistice.

The "war" was occasioned when Menendez withdrew his fighter from a match Monday night at Turner's Arena. Scott was scheduled to go against Irish Johnny Dunne, protege of Benny Leonard. Leonard refused to let his fighter come in for ten rounds and Gabe wouldn't allow Scott, a slow starter, to go in for less than ten.

Menendez and Scott were released from their contract by Matchmaker Ahearn, who immediately substituted Irish Johnny Dean, local favorite, in place of Scott. The District Boxing Commission met yesterday, released Scott and approved Dean.

Commission Warns Ahearn.

But, in an official announcement, the commission "admonished Matchmaker Ahearn against submitting any further contracts without thoroughly clarifying them to the contestants and managers." It also directed Ahearn that "in future mid-ring announcements of coming contests the distance involved must be announced." The announcement, made to the newspapers last night, came from Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the commission.

Thus ends in a sputter what threatened to become a major breach in Washington boxing circles. Ahearn went on to complete his card for Monday night's events, admitting that a "misunderstanding" caused the whole rumpus.

"I like this guy Menendez," Goldie said, "It was just a misunderstanding. Maybe I didn't understand him or maybe he didn't understand me. Anyhow—the matter is closed with no hard feelings.

"Myself, I think that the Dean-Dunne fight looks better at this moment that the Dunne-Scott fracas. Dean is a good boy who likes to fight and you'll see a real battle. I guess maybe it all turned out for the best!"

Menendez "Misunderstood."

Menendez, on the other hand, also admitted that a "misunderstanding" caused the whole affair.

"Goldie and I have been friends for years," Gabe said. "But I gotta protect my fighter. He's a slow starter and maybe would drop two or three of the first rounds. In an 8-round fight maybe he would lose. I can't afford to take a chance like that.

"But it was never my understanding that the fight was to go less than ten rounds. Of course, I've always left everything up to Goldie before and would do so again. It was a misunderstanding, that's all."

Ahearn, after the smoke had cleared, announced that Billy Bullock, local lightweight, and Ray Ingram, featherweight, have been added to the card Monday.

Trainers Get Short End of 19-13 Score

By Perry Wilkinson.

The Indians of Anacostia High School started on the warpath at 3:30 p. m. yesterday and after 40 minutes of prancing around end, whooping for long and flat passes, and tom-a-hawking a belligerent and stubborn enemy, danced and bowed away from the scene of battle with a closely and bitterly contested 19-13 win over the National Training School Settlers.

Led by Little Chief (Flash) Gordon, who had the resiliency of a rubber band—and that boy did get hit by flying projectiles on numerous occasions—the struggle gave the Indians their third straight victory in as many starts. Gordon made runs of 50, 30, and 40 yards during the battle and was instrumental in scoring all of Anacostia's points. That boy really loves the game of football.

One thousand school children—and their spirit should not be omitted here—after watching the progress of the massacre, became bloodthirsty and even though they were noncombatants, you could see a strange lust in their eyes as if they wanted to scalp somebody.

Big Chief Roland Lund, maneuvering his warriors with the skill of a Powhatan, sent out a reconnoitering party and these braves reported that Big Cloud Tom Hutchinson, Little Moon Buck Briensfield and Tom-a-Hawk Face Pavis were wielding a mean hatchet; that Little Chief Gordon was being ably assisted in the toughest battle of the year.

But the Trainers were not running away from the attack. During the second and third periods the work of Harding Johnson and Harold Bowers, whose passes rained like bullets, brought the Settlers' guns into play and before the smoke had cleared away had put across two touchdowns and an extra point. They were still banging away in the closing moments of the engagement.

The damage though had been done and the war whoop you heard downtown was the close of the battle. By the way, Pocahontas was there, but Chief Lund did not use her. He is sending her over to American University to do the extra point kicking for Chief Gus Welch today.

Alabama Favored Over Wave Today

New Orleans, Nov. 5 (AP).—Alabama's unbeaten and untied football team ruled a 3-to-1 favorite over Tulane for their conference battle here tomorrow. Almost 25,000 fans are expected to witness the contest.

Alabama's coach, Frank Thomas, said he expected the "toughest game of the year" against the Greenies. On the other hand, Tulane's mentor, "Red" Dawson, said he thought his squad had only a "slim chance."

Seabiscuit Sets Record In Rich Race

Kurtsinger, was fairly carrying the Washington owned horse along, matching Seabiscuit's every stride. Nearing the eighth pole it became evident that Aneroid was faltering. In a few jumps it was Seabiscuit by himself but only for brief fractions of a second for from the back, where they had been gaining steadily came Burning Star and Caballero II.

Approaching the wire, it was Burning Star that lunged, trying to turn defeat into victory, but the move came too late. It was Seabiscuit by a neck.

Owner Howard announced after the race that he would wait to see the weights for the Bowie Handicap before deciding when he would ship Seabiscuit to California and the the Santa Anita Handicap.

Commission, running in the colors of Jake Lowenstein, came from behind to take the first race, a dash of 6 furlongs for juveniles. The Banstar colt was always a forward factor and finished a half length in front of Lucky Omen, with Equerry, the pacemaker, third. Commission, ridden by Jockey George Seabo, paid $33.

Sir Raleigh Bows.

A 121-to-1 shot came within a half length of winning the second race, in which the favorite players were given a case of jitters. Minton finally got up in time to defeat the disregarded Bomar by half a length and bring a pay-off of $4.30. Peedeeque came from far back in the field to be third. Bomar went to the top at the break and barely failed to last under Jockey F. A. Smith's whip.

Airegla defeated Sir Raleigh, the odds-on favorite, in the third race, winning by a length under a powerful ride by Jockey Joe Renick. The veteran rider got the Bubbling Over filly to the front going to the first turn, and Sir Raleigh, second most of the trip, could not dislodge her. Deep End was a tiring third in the field of six competing at a mile and 70 yards. Airegla paid an $8.80 mutuel.

Headin Home found the fast track to his liking and galloped off with the purse in the fourth race, a sprint of 6 furlongs. Getting to the front directly after the break, it finished six lengths in advance of two longshots, Gold Band and Sunned. Headin Home paid a $7.70 mutuel.

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

DEAR AL, Selections at Pimlico.

Stewards have suspended Jockey D. Scocca for the remainder of the meeting for incompetent riding on Jim Corn yesterday. I second and I'm in favor of some more rulings of the same sort. Mrs. A. J. Abel claimed Honey Cloud out of last year's race for $2,500. Donald Hay, mutuel manager at Charles Town, was a visitor today. W. L. Brann says he has changed the name of the Branncastle Farm at Frederick, Md., to the Glade Valley Farm, but will continue to race horses in his own name. Bennet Creech and Ivan Parke arrived today to attend Monday's sale of the C. V. Whitney horses. Mary Hirsch will race her horses through the Bowie meeting. Stocks was the winner of this morning's race for amateur riders. Charlie White rode the Jacobs horse home two lengths in front of Snobby Scamp and Kosan. A $777.70 mutuel was displayed. A claim of foul was made against the winner, but after deliberation, Stewards Sammy Renick, Harry Richards and Wayne Wright gave the official sign. Starter Charlie Kurtsinger was booed as he got the field away in a jam. The race was at a mile and three sixteenths and the riders were more tired than the horses at the finish. Despite the fact that the race was run at 11:30 a. m., more than 3,000 persons were in the stands. A stallion show will be staged at 12 o'clock today and a bang-up eight-race program begins at 1:15. BILL.

First race—Wambaw comes from a stable full of good jumpers and gets in action here with light weight. Rideaway is improving and should like this course. Bay Dean won easily over these fences and is dangerous.

Second race—Nansemond does his best racing on an off track and may ge it. However, I'm going to string along regardless of conditions. Semi Luna has lots of early speed and should be prominent. Only Son for the show end.

Third race—Sir Steel is a fairly reliable sort and promises to do a lot of running here. Time Me went into the air at break last out when well meant. Better luck would find this one close. Bellum is a possible surprise.

Fourth race — Maitapony has shown speed and courage and will be better if track conditions change. Scotch Bun when right is a good one and should be a bang-up contender. Grog to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Roustabout ran a fine race last out and showed that he

"Doesn't Remember."

Commissioner Meyer declared last night he had no recollection of the incident described. He said:

"My rule is that in uncontested cases, if there seems to be a good reason for telling an applicant what a decision may be, I sometimes do.

"In contested cases I never do.

"I am certain I have never deviated from this rule in contested cases."

Letter Quoted.

In the letter, Gresham wrote Fitzpatrick, "Mr. Meyer requested that I do not disclose the import of the report until it has been published, and until then you will please keep this information in confidence."

The decision in question was one which granted the Texas & Pacific authority to purchase 60 per cent of the voting stock of the Fort Worth Belt Railroad on condition that the purchase price not exceed $700,000.

Exceeded Limit, He Says.

Gresham testified the Texas & Pacific actually spent more than $900,000 to acquire the property because of prior commitments, and charged $200,000 off to "profit and loss."

In the letter from Gresham to Fitzpatrick, Gresham reported that he had informed Meyer what the line intended to do, in the light of the commission's ruling, and that Meyer told him such a plan would be "workable."

Subsequently, Gresham testified, the I. C. C. sought unsuccessfully to prosecute the railroad for failure to comply with its ruling.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, last night criticized Commissioner Meyer.

Such disclousres are "very bad practice," said Truman, who is acting chairman of the Senate Rail Financing Committee.

Copper Price Cut To 11c Per Pound

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—American Smelting and Refining Co. today reduced the price of copper to 41 cents a pound from 11½ cents, following weakness of prices on the London metal exchange.

The price of export copper also dropped to 10.25 cents, compared with 10.55 cents yesterday.

Gold Imports.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that $28,328,130 worth of gold was imported into the United States in the week ended October 29. The Treasury's inactive gold fund increased less than $7,000,000 during the week. Officials indicated the discrepancy was due to stabilization fund transactions.

Wheat Prices Drop to Lows For the Season

Soviet Offers Are Under Those of Competing Export Nations.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—All wheat futures reached season new low price records today and despite transient rallies finished at the day's bottom level.

Action of the wheat market largely paralleled the course of securities, especially in regard to setbacks of quotations as trading drew to an end. One bearish factor given particular notice was that Russia's export offers of wheat were sharply under those of competing countries.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½-⅝ cents under yesterday's finish; December, 88⅜@88½; May, 89@89¼; July, 84⅞@85; Corn, ⅝-1⅜ down; December, 56¼@56⅜; May, 58@58½; July, 59@59⅛. Oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; December, 30½. Rye, unchanged to a drop of 2⅞ cents. Provisions results were unchanged to 7 cents lower.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 5.—Stocks moved up a small hill and then slipped back a little, but gained a little ground on balance, in a dull day with turnover around 1,200,000 shares. United States bonds were firm. Commodities moved ahead, although December wheat closed 1⅛ cents lower at 88½ cents a bushel. In the foreign exchange market, now attracting attention, the dollar weakened on all sides.

About the only encouragement that stock market traders could find was the signs of interest among Congressmen in revising or repealing the undistributed profits tax, as a means of staving off a serious business depression and of lightening the burden of the recession now under way. Whether Congress will be able to do anything sensible with taxes, in spite of the President's opposition, or whether the Chief Executive may become jittery enough over the prospect of a bad trade setback to give in a bit, remains to be seen. The stock market doesn't seem to be willing to bet much one way or the other; it hasn't lost all hope, but it hasn't many illusions left either.

Radio Pays.

Some favorable flotsam and jetsam in stocks was picked up. Radio voted its first dividend on the common shares, and the shares rose a fraction. About that time, second hour, the rest of the market hardened, but it was unable to hold its best gains. Most of the afternoon was spent in slowly allowing a little of the morning recovery to fall off. At the best the active issues were up as much as 2 points. Steel, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Sears Roebuck and Consolidated Edison were favorites. Westinghouse rose 3 points and duPont jumped nearly 5 points.

Gold mining stocks held their favor with the further rise in the open-market gold price in London and the continued fall in commodity prices. Buyers of the gold shares think that, even if their hopes for an elevation in the price of gold by not justified, profits of the mining companies will tend to rise as the fall in commodity prices and as unemployment, with its depressing effect on wages, increases. Price gains in the gold shares today were the sharpest since the recovery in that section began. Homestake gained 3 points. Alaska Juneau, Dome and McIntyre advanced 1 to 2 points. South American Gold & Platinum improved a good fraction on large volume.

Farm Stocks Revive.

In miscellaneous stocks Hiram Walker was lifted more than 3 points. Other whisky issues were irregular. Farm implements climbed rapidly. Case made it 4 points. Mail orders also hardened. At the best the steels, motors, rails and chemicals regained 1 to 3 points and leading oil shares stiffened. Standard of California held around its previous closing price, dampened by news of Mexican seizure of property. Amerada hopped 5 points. Air Reduction felt pressure. Associated Dry Goods lost 11 points on its first sale in several weeks. The turnover in Radio was about 5 per cent of the total sales volume.

Credit statistics at the week-end confirm trade figures indicating a further fall in business and an increase in the pace of decline. Stock prices, nevertheless, have discounted, on the basis of the bear markets of former years, anything likely to happen and perhaps much more of a business setback than is probable in near future. A new factor in the monetary position this week is the diversion of gold. Three weeks or a month ago the arrivals of gold to this country began to decline sharply, partly because of the interruption of the foreign influx of funds and partly because of the heavy revival in private hoarding of the metal.

Gold Tide Turns.

In the past week our reported gold imports plus gold purchases of domestic mined gold were considerably greater than the actual addition to the monetary gold stock, which was $3,000,000, suggesting that some gold already counted in the Treasury's supply was released for foreign account. It might easily have gone to Chinese use, or perhaps to that of France. The point is that the steady gold influx to this country, that averaged thirty to fifty millions a week, during the many months of our business recovery, has come to an end. Hoarding demand for the metal has been largely responsible. In other words, funds which would have come here had all been confidence in our business position, now prefer to seek safety against both business depression and currency depreciation in gold, which is held in London bank vaults.

As soon as business on this side turns upward again, the flow of gold this way probably will be resumed, unless in the meantime a great revival of confidence in France and some other countries takes place. If, on the other hand, our depression deepens, we stand to lose a considerable quantity of the gold already on hand. Since more than $1,000,000,000 in gold imports has been sterilized on receipt, there is no reason why we couldn't ship out that much without any tightening of the money market, but the psychological effect would be somewhat deflationary.

Keeping Funds Safe.

While no official information is obtainable on the manner of gold sales by this country, the operation could be carried on through sale by the stabilization fund (which makes no report) of gold which it holds abroad in an amount sufficient to offset imports into this country. That gold might then find its way into hoarders' hands. In this connection local banks report a recent decline in foreign deposits with them. The Federal Reserve Board statement for this week shows a shrinkage of foreign bank deposits of $16,000,000.

The best Wall Street opinion is that many foreigners, formerly interested in American stocks, now are buying gold. No risk of loss of capital is involved; the only loss is that of interest on the money, and the gamble is for a capital gain in case of a further increase in the price of gold or of a fall in the currencies exchanged for gold by the hoarders, many of whom now are said to be Dutch and Swiss.

Commodity Prices.

The decline in wholesale commodity prices continues. This week the Bureau of Labor index dropped 1.1 per cent, marking the fifth consecutive weekly decline, to a new low level for the year. As always happens, the fall in raw materials is greater than that of finished goods, for the latter are held up by the brittleness of labor costs. So far retail prices have not turned downward, but that also is traditional. In a few weeks, it is expected, some softening in the retail field also will be seen, barring sharp recovery in wholesale prices. What is taking place is a regime of hand to mouth buying pending the disposition of inventories, and since the process is going forward rapidly, hope is good that the period of readjustment will be a short one, after which fresh forward buying will be resumed.

A B A President Opposes U. S. Bank Monopoly

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 5.—A plea for the preservation of the existing American banking system, a sound fiscal policy by the Federal Government, and a balanced Federal budget was made here today at the annual convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association by Orval W. Adams, newly elected president of the American Bankers Association. Mr. Adams, who is executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank at Salt Lake City, Utah, described the American banking system as a "mature product of long and steady growth, reflecting changes in economic and industrial conditions occurring with the development of our country, a system consequently peculiarly adapted to meet the needs of our people."

He stated his opposition to current proposals to transfer the bank supervisory agencies of the various States to a single Federal agency such as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and a similar transference of the functions of the Comptroller of the Currency, whose office supervises the national banks.

"Unification of supervision in whatever form leads in the same direction," he said, "and in the last analysis unification, so-called, will be found to be synonymous with destruction of our present banking system. Never should the State departments surrender to other agencies their statutory rights of supervision," he declared.

Mr. Adams deplored the Government ownership of the Federal Reserve system now proposed in Congress, asserting that it would create a banking monopoly. "The Federal Reserve system owned by the Government could and would develop into the greatest monopoly ever created," he stated, "and as a money monopoly it would constitute a monopoly of the most menacing kind.

"If the American banking system is to be preserved," he continued, "a place of refuge for banks, when conditions become intolerable, must be preserved. When hasty, ill-considered legislation would impair or destroy the usefulness, the proper functioning, of national banks, it must always be possible for such banks to enter the State system, with the privilege at the same time of surrendering their membership in the Federal Reserve system or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or both, and conversely, under like conditions, State banks should have the privilege of entering the national system."

Curb Prices Firm Against Selling

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Curb stocks ended a little on the upside today after late selling had shaved down earlier gains. Most price changes were confined to fractions. Widest movers included the higher priced shares. Aluminum Co. advanced a point to 90 and Newmont Mining was up 2 to 63; American Gas & Electric pushed forward a point to 25⅝, while Montgomery Ward "A" lost a point to 132.

Gaining fractions were St. Regis Paper at 4⅛; Standard Power & Light, 2; United Light & Power "A," 3⅝; Wright Hargreaves, 7⅝; Arkansas Natural Gas "A," 4; Cord Corporation, 2⅜; Creole Petroleum, 24⅛; Electric Bond & Share, 10, and Lake Shore Mines, 53.

Fractional losers included Niagara Hudson Power, 8⅝; Sherwin Williams, 85½; United Gas, 4⅞; American Light & Traction, 13¾ and American Superpower, 1. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. dropped 3¼ to 61¾.

Hercules Powder Doubles Common

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 5.—Stockholders of Hercules Powder Co., at a special meeting today approved the split-up of the company's common stock into twice as many shares.

The split-up will be effected by issuing on November 23, to each stockholder of record at the close of business on November 12, one additional share of common stock for each share held on the record date.

Cotton Rallies; Foreign Buying

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Cotton rallied today on foreign buying and covering, with contracts less plentiful. March advanced from 7.72 to 7.80 and closed at 7.79, with final prices 9 to 10 points net higher.

The market opened 5 to 7 points higher in response to steadier cables and on buying promoted by weakness of the dollar in foreign exchanged.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was irregular today. G. O. P. Creates Body of 100 to Draw Up Policy

First Task Is 'Consideration of Pertinent Issues of Government.'

National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, He termed it a "departure from stereotype politics" and hailed it as the "first step in a real forward movement."

He recalled frequent demands for a restatement of Republican principles, especially since the court issue arose, and reported the establishment of a program committee represented the concensus of the party's chieftains.

None of the members voiced objections when a standing vote on the proposal was taken. But previously Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa, had attacked the resolution and R. B. Creager, of Texas, termed it unsatisfactory. Spangler was one of the ranking supporters of former President Hoover's move to call a midterm convention.

Call on Congress.

The resolution pointed out the program committee's report would be presented to the national committee. Then it will be decided whether a "national, general forum or conference" should be the proper vehicle for carrying their creed to the American public.

The committee also adopted a resolution demanding the "immediate termination of extraordinary powers delegated by Congress to the President" and urging Congress to "resume its rightful place."

The committee rejected a petition that it declare vacant the seat of National Committeeman Joseph W. Tolbert, of South Carolina, when a sub-committee reported the petitioners had insufficient evidence to support their charges that he failed to support the party's nominees.

In a Nation-wide radio address tonight, Hamilton summarized the results of the committee meeting and invited Republicans who had any suggestions on pertinent problems to forward them to the national committee.

The chairman said the national committee might elect to submit the program drafters' report to "regional conferences" instead of to a national convocation of the party, but at any rate, he concluded, it would be "placed in a position where it can be considered by Americans throughout the Nation."

Hoover Approves Move.

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover said tonight that the new program committee authorized by the Republican National Committee in Chicago could perform a great national service "if it is appointed from unafraid men and women who will stand up and be counted."

The program committee, he said, will have "a great opportunity to lay the foundations of fusion of all forces who not only oppose many New Deal methods, but who want a way out of this crisis."

Hoover's statement said:

"It is something that the urge of the rank and file has pushed the Republican machine the larger half of a strong movement forward from a policy of negation.

"The program committee of 100 is to be appointed as proposed by myself and associates to formulate a declaration of convictions and an affirmative program for the party. General conference or no general conference, the declaration is the thing. The rank and file will probably take care of the conference in time.

"It should include not only political leaders but leaders from the educational, the professional, labor, agricultural and business world. It must include youth.

"If it does a real job it will require four or five months, and in the meantime it should be assisted by the thorough debate of policies and program. In the process, the club auxiliaries and State organizations should formulate their recommendations in order that the rank and file should register their views.

"The program committee will have a great opportunity to give life and vigor; to unify the Republican Party and to realign it to the needs of the people."

Officers of Algic Deny Any Guilt in Death of Seaman

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.—Two officers of the steamship Algic pleaded not guility today to charges of involuntary manslaughter in a hearing before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen.

The officers, Ernest B. Waters, second mate, and John F. Pike, third mate, were ordered held for a further hearing on November 15. They were released after posting $500 bond.

Waters and Pike were arrested on warrants obtained by the 14 Algic seamen who are awaiting action of a Federal grand jury on charges involving the mutiny and conspiracy law.

The seamen charged that negligence of the two officers had led to the death of Howell V. Gill, who was drowned at Victoria, Brazil, when he attempted to "jump ship" with three other members of the crew.

Several of the seamen told Commissioner Cullen that Gill and the three other men attempted to leave the ship in a small dugout which filled and sank. They claimed they had asked Pike for permission to lower a boat and go to the rescue.

According to their testimony, Pike refused to let another boat be lowered, saying that the men had taken the dugout without permission and that "it was their own fault."

Heir Born to Tobacco Fortune of Duke Family

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—A son was born here today to Mrs. Priscilla St. George Duke, 18-year-old wife of Angier Biddle Duke, beginning the fourth generation of the famous tobacco family.

The latest heir to the American fortune founded by his great-grandfather, Washington Duke, weighed six and one-half pounds. he is a second cousin of Doris Duke Cromwell and, through his maternal grandmother, Mrs. George B. St. George, a second cousin of President Roosevelt.

already were Communists, naturally; the purpose of training them was to make them "cadres," or leaders, alert and resourceful comrades, who could go forth and do an effective job of proselyting in America's merchant marine.

Merchant Marine Held Key.

The establishment of the school was an indication of the importance which the Communist Party attaches to the merchant marine. In the study sessions that were to follow, it was emphasized that shipping was a "paralyzing industry." Let the workers tie up the ships and they could paralyze a hundred other industries. On the waterfront, too, Communists could often strike a blow to aid their comrades abroad, as, for example, by refusing to load munitions or sail with munitions for those "Fascist murderers, Hitler and Mussolini, who are trying to destroy democracy in Spain."

The first professor to lecture before the new Maritime Training School was Comrade Mindell, a heavy-set, shaggy-haired, bespectacled Communist who learned his Marxian doctrine at the fountain head in Moscow.

Discipline—'Yah?'

Comrade Mindell taught political economy, but the students were to remember him chiefly for his lectures on discipline. He talked about discipline for two days, morning and afternoon, punctuating his lectures with frequent questions and a quizzical "Yah?"

"America exports most of her cotton crop, yah?" he would ask.

"Yes," the student would reply.

"Well, if there were no ships she couldn't export it, yah?" he would pursue.

Some of the comrade-students, displaying a woeful lack of solemnity, began using the "yah" themselves before Mindell's tour of duty was completed. They had to admit his arguments were sound, however, particularly when he made them personal, and pointed out that unless the comrades assigned to cleaning up the washrooms attended to their duties some of them might come down with "athlete's foot" or a visitation of vermin.

Live 5 in a Room.

"Organization decides everything," Comrade Mindell said, in opening his first lecture, and he said it again in closing his last one.

The comrade-students lived in the hotel, 3 to 5 in a room, and slept on cots. They arose at 7 and took a half-hour's hike over the countryside, often stopping to watch the ferry heading for Newburgh—historic Newburgh, with its famous Hasbrouck House, where Washington had his headquarters; its Epiphany College, Mount St. Mary's Academy and the Oblate Fathers College.

They breakfasted at 8 and showed up in the classroom at 8:30. A two-hour lecture followed, at the conclusion of which the comrades were given a list of books to study.

Two-Hour Study Period.

The study period lasted from 10:30 to 12:30. Required reading included Marx' "Wage, Labor and Capital Stalin's "Stakhanov," Browder's "What Is Communism?" Lenin's "Imperialism and Labor Fact Books," and Anna Rochester's "Resolution of the Seventh Congress."

Another half-hour's walk followed, and at 1 p. m. the students sat down for lunch.

Thereafter the students formed into groups, and for the next hour and a half each group met for a discussion. The topic might be "Contradictions of Capitalism," or it might be "White Chauvinism and Petty Bourgeois Nationalism." If it were the latter, the students would discuss strategy for winning Negroes to the ranks of communism.

Change to Bourgeois Attire.

In the late afternoon, the various groups would come together for a conference class meeting. At this a spokesman for each group would report on his group's activity for the day.

Following this the student-comrades would wash up and in some cases change from their sweaters and overalls into clothes a bit more bourgeois. Then came dinner.

There were some who, at the outset, thought that the after-dinner period would be a good time to go into Beacon and perhaps buy a beer. This, however, was frowned on, the argument running something like this:

"Why should you, Comrade, go into Beacon and spend a dollar while the rest of us have to stay here? Of course, if you had enough money to treat us all—well, that would be different."

Poor Petty Capitalist.

But apparently nobody did have enough to provide beer for all, so they all stayed at Camp Nitgadaiget, and the petty capitalist who ran the beer joint in town had to suffer the loss of their trade.

Although the student-comrades had started the working day at 8:30 a. m., they were required, after dinner, to attend another class that began at 8:30 p. m. This lasted for an hour and was devoted mostly to discussion.

That was the routine for five days in the week. On Saturdays the lectures and study periods were shortened, and the students were thus able to do a number of mundane things in no way connected with Marx. For example, they would all take a bath.

Sundays also were relatively light. Generally a distinguished Communist, having run up from New York to Camp Nitgadaiget for the week-end, would give an inspirational lecture. Otherwise there was little to do but read the latest Daily Worker.

Nobody bothered about going to church. Not that there was any ban on it; atheism, it was explained, was required only of the Bolsheviks—those more advanced Communists, men and women who had proved themselves, who had suffered martyrdom in capitalist jails, and who were ready to die for the cause.

Melting Pot of Races.

Among the students were Italians, Jews, Irish-Americans, two German-Americans, several who might be called old native stock, one Negro and a Filipino.

Most of these were avowed athiests, but there were others who were unwilling to definitely let go their church ties. As was explained, they were not asked to do so. However, they were made to feel that religion was really a bit ridiculous and unbecoming in a true Communist.

Consequently, cursing in the traditional sense was discouraged. To use God's name, it was pointed out, was a sort of tacit recognition. The older Communists, in getting off a hearty oath, would invoke the name of Lenin.

None of the student-comrades were allowed to have mail addressed to them directly at Camp Nitgadaiget. Relatives or friends would send it to Communist Party headquarters at 35 East Twelfth street, whence it was forwarded.

The director of the school was Paul Cline, alias Al Peretti, a Bolshevik, who toured the country selling the Daily Worker, who once was jailed in Indiana for his radical activities, and who now is a Communist organizer on the West Coast waterfront.

Another lecturer was Prof. Albert Moreau, 37 years old, husky and prematurely gray. Moreau could go along evenly and calmly until he came to the question of the "Fascist dogs" and what they were doing to "democratic Spain." After that he became somewhat violent and was given to pulling out his own hair.

A Confidential Talk.

Bill Lawrence, a party organizer attached to the clothing industry section, gave the student-comrades their biggest thrill. He had lectured them on the technique of organizing units on American ships and had emphasized the importance of the merchant marine to the party. Later in the day he announced that he was going to give an important "confidential" talk. The doors were locked, tables were removed and the students were shorn of their pencils so that they couldn't make notes.

Then Comrade Lawrence told of the Communist Party's plans in the event it was suppressed in the United States. The talk lasted six hours. No matter what happened, he said, no matter how many raids were made, the party would still function. Already, he said, it had designated alternative, underground headquarters and had perfected plans for printing propaganda.

Uncle Sam Scolded.

David Laurie, a young, Moscow-educated professor with buck teeth, lectured on United States history, emphasizing that the Constitution, while a liberal document on its face, was hardly that in its interpretation. He discussed the oppression of Negroes and scolded Uncle Sam for deporting Communist aliens while allowing White Russians, German Nazis and Italian Fascists to remain.

The students also received an occasional visit from Comrade Mary Dalton, director of the district school on the Camp Nitgadaiget reservation. This 30-year-old brunette, who would be called Communism's Joan of Arc except that Communists don't have much use for the French saint, has distinguished herself by work in the South. She was jailed at the same time as Herndon, the colored Communist.

Vanguard of 50,000.

Tim Holmes, another colored Communist, was one of the most forceful lecturers to appear before the class. A pudgy, double-chinned man of 35, he talked on White Chauvinism and on Black Chauvinism. The colored man, he said, who spoke disparagingly of "poor white trash" was just as guilty as the white man who referred to a Negro as a "nigger."

At the end of the intensive course, the students—now potential cadres, or leaders—were sent out with the reminder that they were the "vanguard of 50,000 seamen." Since then they have done much to justify the faith placed in them, forming their fo'csle soviets, playing leading parts in sit-down strikes and helping to strengthen the C. I. O.'s National Maritime Union and to combat the "reactionary" A. F. of L.

(Another article will appear tomorrow.)

Ship Owners Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 5.—Frederick Myers, chairman of a district committee of the National Maritime Union, said today that shipowners need disciplining more than seamen.

Charges of misconduct on the part of unionized seamen, Myers said, were part of a propoganda campaign designed "to build up a semblance of public opinion for new antilabor legislation.

The maritime union, Myers said, would resist marine legislation patterned after the railway labor act, which compels arbitration of labor disputes.

W. A. Donovan, 37, Dies in Hospital

William A. Donovan, 37, official in the Department of Commerce for 15 years, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. Donovan was assistant chief of the division of hides and leathers, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in the Department of Commerce. He entered the bureau in 1922 following three years' service in the Census Bureau. During the war he served in the officers' training school at Holy Cross University, Worcester, Mass.

A native of Boston, Mr. Donovan had lived here at 1417 Netown street northwest. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Church.

He leaves four brothers, Robert Leo, John James and Joseph D. Donovan, all of Boston; and the Rev. Edward J. Donovan, O. P., chaplain at the Mary Immaculate School in Ossining, N. Y.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. Monday in St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, following services at 8:30 a. m. in Taltavull's funeral home, 3619 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will take place in Arlington Cemetery.

Pastor Dies

Harris & Ewing.
MGR. PATRICK C. GAVAN.

Father Gavan, Sacred Heart Priest, Is Dead

Archbishop Curley to Officiate at Requiem at 10:30 Tuesday Morning.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick C. Gavan, for more than 23 years pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church and one of the best beloved priests in Washington, died yesterday morning in the church rectory after a long illness. He was 65 on Thursday.

For more than two years Mgr. Gavan had been in failing health. He never completely recovered from a heart attack he suffered in May, 1935. Two weeks ago he became critically ill with pneumonia.

The devotion of Mgr. Gavan in his administration of the parish for almost a quarter of a century is outstanding in the records of the Catholic Church. Under his guidance the parish membership grew from slightly more than 200 to one of the largest in the city.

When Mgr. Gavan came here in April, 1914, Sacred Heart was located at the corner of Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, on the site now occupied by the Tivoli Theater.

Built New Church.

Mgr. Gavan was a leader in bringing about the construction of the present church at Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, which is considered one of the most beautiful in America.

He witnessed during his service the erection of the Sacred Heart School on Park road and the Sacred Heart Convent, at 1618 Monroe street northwest.

In June, 1921, the cornerstone of the new church was laid. At that time it was a departure in the modeling of churches. It was designed from the ancient, fifth-century San Vitale. The work on the edifice probably is the most beautiful in the way of Gothic Churches in the New World, artists and architects have agreed.

Mgr. Gavan received his early education in the parochial schools of Baltimore. He then went to St. Charles' College, just outside that city. After this, Mgr. Gavan attended the American College in Rome, where he took his theological courses. He was ordained there in 1897 by the Most Rev. Archbishop Keane, first rector of the Catholic University of America.

Assistant Pastor in Baltimore.

He then returned to Baltimore, where he became an assistant pastor at St. John's Church, a post he held for one year. Next he was appointed assistant pastor of St. Joseph's Church, in Washington, and he remained there for several years. Mgr. Gavan was named chancellor of the Archdiocese of Baltimore in 1902, and lived in the residence of the cardinal in Baltimore.

Until his appointment to the pastorate of Sacred Heart he was chancellor and secretary to Cardinal Gibbons.

In 1889 Sacred Heart Parish was organized here. There were but 104 members in 1901, while today it is one of the largest parishes in the city.

Mgr. Gavan led a drive for funds in which $230,000 was pledged for the construction of a new church when the need for a new church became evident in 1920.

Mgr. Gavan, who was born in England and came to Baltimore at the age of 10, is survived by two sisters, Miss Anna Gavan and Miss Adele Gavan, both of Baltimore.

Requiem Mass Tuesday.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley will pontificate at requiem mass in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

He will be assisted by Father Charles F. Morrissey, of St. Ann's Church, Baltimore; the Rev. George Johnson, of Catholic University; the Rev. Henry Collins, native of the parish; the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, of St. Thomas Church, and the Rev. Thomas A. Cunningham, of Issue, Md.

The eulogy will be delivered by the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., of Catholic University.

Mgr. Gavan's body lay in state at the rectory last night. Tomorrow it will be moved to Sacred Heart Church, where the thousands of men, women and children whom Mgr. Gavan served may pay their respects.

A special requiem mass for children will be held in the church Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

Marriner Assassin Sentenced to Hang

Beirut, Lebanon, Nov. 5 (AP).—Meguerdich Karayan was condemned to death today for the assassination October 12, of James Theodore Marriner, United States consul general.

There is no appeal from the death sentence, which will be hanging at a date to be fixed immediately.

Karayan an Armenian-American, returned to Aleppo from the United States in 1924. He was said to have admitted he killed Marriner because he felt "insulted" that his request for a passport visa to return to the United States had been refused. Actually, it developed that the visa had been granted but the letter informing Karayan of the fact miscarried in the mails.

Labor Factions May Share Field As Peace Step

Much Confusion Cleared.

"There were no decisions—we never got that far along. But we uncovered useful information and we cleared up a lot of confusion that existed on the question of industrial unionism. We made definite progress in approaching a solution of our difficulties."

Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O. conferees, volunteered: "I echo the sentiments of Mr. Harrison." Murray, who has appeared the more pessimistic of the two over prospects for settlement, was asked if he thought the outlook "more hopeful."

"I would rather not go into that," he replied, "but Mr. Harrison was right when he said we are progressing."

Absent, both Thursday and yesterday, were the bitter clashes that had marked past conferences. Negotiators agreed to resume their discussions next Monday afternoon, where they left off yesterday.

Murray disclosed that conferees were attempting to reach a "tentative understanding" on which industries should be organized on the "mass" or C. I. O. principle, before taking up proposals for a "truce" guaranteeing existing C. I. O. and A. F. of L. jurisdictions from membership raids by the other.

Division of Field Preferred.

"We preferred the other sequence."

The peace negotiators turned yesterday to those industries in which both C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. are battling most bitterly for exclusive jurisdiction, and attempted to determine which should yield to the other in a reunited labor movement embracing both principles.

Among the fields where strong conflict has developed are the radio and electrical industries, office workers, State, municipal and county employes, agricultural workers, shipyards and in some branches of the transportation and maritime industries.

Harrison has indicated an A. F. of L. willingness to recognize the jurisdiction of the original C. I. O. unions, as well as the Newspaper Guild and the fur workers. He has suggested possible A. F. of L. withdrawal from the rubber and maritime industries, and C. I. O. jurisdiction in the New York transportation field. C. I. O. spokesmen have replied that existing A. F. of L. organizations in these fields were "mere shells" and they sought a much broader sphere of activity.

Leaders Report to Chiefs.

Harrison reported to President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, following yesterday's conference. Murray lunched with his chief, John L. Lewis.

Although both leaders recognized they were still a very long way from agreement, the hopeless gloom that had overshadowed earlier conferences had lifted somewhat when members yesterday entered the committee room.

"It looks hopeful to me," said Sherman Dalrymple, president of the C. I. O. affiliated United Rubber Workers.

Charles Howard, of the Typographical Union, secretary of the C. I. O., said: "It looks better. I think there is a better understanding of the problems than at any other time since the split."

J. E. Anderson, Capital Grocery Official, Dies

James Earl Anderson, 46, secretary and assistant treasurer of the Sanitary Grocery Co., Inc., died yesterday at his home, 7511 Thirteenth street northwest, following illness of six weeks.

Mr. Anderson entered the grocery company 14 years ago as office manager of its headquarters office here. A native of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, he had been a resident of Washington 18 years.

Mr. Anderson was a charter member of the Petworth Lodge of Masons, and a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Cost Accountants Association and the Manor Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Faye Rhodes Anderson; his mother, Mrs. Adella Anderson, both of Washington, and two brothers, J. Arnold Anderson, also of Washington, and O. R. Anderson, New Kensington, Pa.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., Monday, at the home, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Bob Burns Says—

My Uncle Skinny Flint runs a resort down home and he advertises that there is always a south wind blowing at his place. One day one of them grouchy fellas, that's always enjoyin' poor health up in the chilly North, come down there just to get that southern breeze and sure 'nuf the first day he got there, a nice balmy breeze was blowin' from the South; but the next mornin', when he got up, it was chilly and a gale was blowin' in from the north.

This man went stormin' in to my uncle's office and he says, "I thought you said you always had a south wind here!" My uncle says, "Well, she was blowin' from the south yesterday, wasn't she?" The man says "Yes," and my uncle says, "Well that's her comin' back!"

Duke Delays U. S. Visit After 'Misstatements'

Paris statement was issued, cabled the duke from New York asking to be relieved of all duties in connection with the tour "because of mistaken attacks upon me here.")

Even close associates of the former British monarch were kept in doubt regarding his final decision until the last moment.

Earlier, a day of conjecture on the duke's reaction to the action of the Baltimore federation seemed to have been ended by a terse communique issued by Lieut. Forwood stating "there is absolutely no change in our plans."

U. S. Embassy Silent.

The United States embassy was not informed of the final announcement until after it was issued and a spokesman said the embassy had "no statement" to make.

British said the decision to postpone the trip probably was based upon two factors:

1. The duke desired not to create any possible strain on Anglo-American relations and felt that any trouble over his visit would offend Great Britain generally.

2. The duke considered that in view of the resolution of the Baltimore Federation of Labor the time was not ripe for a visit.

During the day servants had packed the Windsors' trunks, leaving the couple only enough clothes to fill the hand-luggage for the voyage aboard the Bremen to New York. Many of the duchess' gowns were packed by the designers where she selected the ones she had planned to wear for the first time when she arrived in her homeland.

The duchess was described as "deeply disappointed" by the change in plans.

Where the couple intended to turn next remained a secret. The American tour had been planned as the key point of an industrial survey of several countries, in which Germany first was visited.

Keeps Friend, Drops Trip.

While the direct cause of the change in plans was believed to have been the critical resolution of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, the request of Bedaux to be relieved of all duties in connection with the tour was seen as the final, contributing factor.

Edward apparently abandoned his plans rather than publicly drop his American friend under fire, persons close to the Windsors said.

"Duke and Duchess of Windsor Declared Undesirables by American Workers' Unions."

English newspapers also reported the resolution which referred to the Windsors' recent visit to Germany as "slumming parties" of "uniformed sentimentalists."

Guest of British Envoy.

Windsor was guest of honor at a luncheon given today by Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador. It was announced as a "private affair" attended by 20 British and French friends.

Representatives of the United States and British embassies and the French government had made arrangements to bid the Windsors farewell at the Cherbourg boat train at noon tomorrow.

In Baltimore, Joseph P. McCurdy, president of the Baltimore Federation of Labor and author of the federation's resolution criticizing Bedaux, expressed surprise tonight when informed the former king had "postponed" his tour.

Dislikes Friends of "Prince."

"All I got to say is that when the prince and the duchess do come to America, they should have their itinerary arranged by someone who has the confidence and good-will of the American working people," the former garment worker said.

McCurdy, commenting on the duke's statement attributing his decision to "grave misconceptions . . . and misstatements," said:

"Any misstatement that has arisen can be traced to the fact that Charles E. Bedaux, that arch-enemy of labor, was selected to make the prince's itinerary."

A forceful "no" was his answer when asked if he objected to the visit of the royal couple.

Asked under what sponsorship the duke and duchess might visit the United States that would be agreeable to labor, McCurdy said:

Ought to See System Work.

"I would have liked him to come here and get a look at this Bedaux system in its raw state," Gorman said.

"I think it would have been most edifying to the duke."

Gorman issued a statement yesterday denouncing the Bedaux system for industrial efficiency, known in union labor circles as the "stretchout."

The duke, Gorman declared, should visit Southern textile mills "to see the tension and strain under which those people are driven."

The text of the duke's statement follows:

"It is announced tonight on behalf of the Duke of Windsor that he has decided to postpone his visit to America."

Wants to Be "Understood."

"His Royal Highness arrived at this decision with great reluctance and after much deliberation, but he feels that, owing to grave misconceptions which have arisen and misstatements which have appeared regarding the motives and purpose of his industrial tour, there was no alternative but to defer it for the present.

"The duke emphatically repeats that there is no shadow of justification for any suggestion he is allied with any industrial system or that he is for or against any particular political or racial doctrine and he expresses the earnest hope that after this announcement his real and sincere motive for the proposed visit to America will be properly understood.

"His Royal Highness will personally convey his thanks to those industrial companies who so generously extended invitations to him and to all who assisted in the arrangements."

The duke's announcement in Paris followed a cable to him from Bedaux, which said:

"Sire:

"I am compelled in honesty and friendship to advise you that because of mistaken attacks upon me here, I am convinced that your proposed study will be made difficult under my guidance.

"Since my sole object has been and is to serve your repeatedly expressed desire to obtain first-hand information from personal observation, I respectfully suggest, and, in your behalf, I implore that you relieve me from all my duties in connection with your American tour.

"I shall be happy to extend to the person designated by you as my successor every possible assistance and co-operation.

"Your Devoted Friend."

"Grateful as I am for your request that I continue, I nevertheless beg you to be guided by my knowledge that my deepest wish is the full attainment of the objects of your visit to the United States.

"I remain, sire, your devoted friend.

"CHARLES E. BEDAUX."

Bedaux, a one-time "sandhog," who rose to riches as a production engineer, referred to recent outbursts of hostility against himself by various labor groups—notably in Baltimore, the former home of Wallis Warfield, now the Duchess of Windsor.

Bedaux talked by transatlantic telephone with the duke yesterday, informing him of the attacks, but the duke laughed off any suggestion of serious concern, and told him, in effect, "not to worry."

Royal Status Denied.

Bedaux was quoted yesterday as saying: "Out of 100 chances that they will come, about 90 are gone."

The reason, Bedaux said, was because of "unpleasant developments" in the United States. These, the Baltimore Sun listed as:

"The reported decision of the State Department, in deference to British wishes, not to accord royal status to the duchess during the proposed visit."

Criticism also had been leveled at the duke because of his visit to Germany. Anti-Nazi groups declared the visit demonstrated Edward's sympathy for Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime.

The duke and duchess were to have arrived in New York harbor on the Bremen November 11, and would have continued immediately to Washington.

He was to have been the guest of the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, at a formal banquet, and of President Roosevelt at tea in the White House.

While in Washington he was to have broadcast his greetings to the people of the United States.

From there he was to have returned to New York City and later visit the Mohawk Valley in upstate New York.

During the week-end of November 20 he intended to go back to Washington, after which a Southern tour and a visit to California were in prospect.

British Hail Decision.

By the United Press

LONDON, Nov. 5.—British government and Buckingham Palace circles were cheered tonight by the Duke of Windsor's announcement, in Paris that he and his Baltimore-born duchess have postponed their visit to the United States.

They had been apprehensive lest the former king become involved in some unpleasant incident upon his arrival in the United States due to an outburst of American labor attacks.

White House Is Silent.

By the United Press.

Neither the White House nor the British Embassy would comment last night on the Duke of Windsor's postponement of his visit to the United States.

for the royal couple by Mrs. Merryman. The hotel was to be the official residence, however, on both visits—with the approval of the duke—in order to avoid inconveniencing his hostess at the private residence.

Private Dinner November 11.

Two of their four nights were to be spent by the duke and duchess at the residence, where a private dinner was to have been given in their honor the night of November 11, their first in America.

The duke and duchess were not to land in New York, but were to leave the boat in quarantine and be taken to a siding at Jersey City, where they were to board a special train for Washington. Arriving here, the duke was to place an Armistice Day wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

It was revealed yesterday also that the groundwork for the recognition of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, by the State Department and the British Embassy, announced only this week, really was laid weeks before, when Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, was in London.

He is said to have called on Bedaux, in whose chateau in France the duke and duchess were married, to tell him the trip could be made with the blesing of the British government.

"Mr. Lindsay?"

"I do not know a Mr. Lindsay," Bedaux is reported to have said when a servant informed him Lindsay was calling. When he discovered the identity of his caller, however, he received him cordially.

Subsequently the State Department is said to have assured the duke's friends he would be welcomed at the White House.

Following their second visit to Washington, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were to tour the Southern States on the first leg of their junket over the continent.

Seal Weighing Lawsuit Against Health Project

Would Have HOLC Group Ruled Illegal or a Taxable Insurance Firm.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal last night indicated that proceedings will be instituted against Group Health Association, Inc., which opened for business Monday as a group plan for the benefit of employes of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and related agencies.

He said he will confer on Monday with Leslie C. Garnett, U. S. attorney, to determine which office should take action against the association.

Seal voiced the opinion that the organization is practicing medicine as a corporation, something which the courts have ruled against in the past. If Garnett holds the same view, it would be the duty of the U. S. attorney's office to launch appropriate action, the corporation counsel declared.

Should the two attorneys decide that the HOLC unit is operating legally as a group hospitalization corporation, then it will be the District's duty to force it to comply with local insurance laws, Seal added.

At the same time he disclosed that he had notified the officers of Group Hospitalization, Inc., which has been functioning here for several years and which now has approximately 40,000 members, that they must obtain an insurance license or cease operations.

Seal's inquiry into the HOLC plan was based upon a memorandum by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, but it came after various District officials had received copies of the report of the American Medican Association condemning the health association as a corporation illegally.

Dr. John F. Preston, spokesman of the District Medical Society, said the society at its meeting this week had adopted a resolution proposing that copies be sent to appropriate District officials. He said the resolution had not in itself denounced the HOLC set-up.

Spokesmen for the association said in its defense that legal experts of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board had examined the set-up and were convinced it is not an insurance company but merely a corporation engaged in selling service.

Social Agencies Assail Training School Ouster

Lack of Notice or Reasons for Dr. Smith's Dismissal Cited by Board.

The method by which Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith was dismissed as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls was deplored last night by the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies.

In a letter to F. W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, which discharged the executive last week, the council officials took exception to the manner in which Dr. Smith was discharged.

"The board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies, by its nature a social planning body, is concerned with the progress of all public and private social agencies in Washington," said the letter, which was signed by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, chairman of the board of directors of the council, and the two other board members, Miss Belle Sherwin and Willard C. Smith.

'Unfavorable Publicity' Cited.

"For this reason it is greatly disturbed by the unfortunate situation associated with the dismissal of the superintendent of the National Training School for Girls without notice or statement of reasons. The method used has caused unfavorable publicity concerning the institution and is likely to hamper seriously the solution of the extremely difficult problems involved in the treatment of juvenile delinquents.

"While the problems of personnel administration are the sole responsibility of the Board of Public Welfare, the board of the Council of Social Agenies cannot but deplore the method by which the superintendent was dismissed, especially the lack of advance notice; absence of either reasons or charges stated in writing; the consequent denial to the superintendent of the right to reply to charges. Such arbitrary action affords too dangerous a precedent.

Seek Sound Standards.

"It is the responsibility of the Council of Social Agencies to keep before the community sound standards of administrative practice and policy which have been developed by study and experience. We wish to assure the board of our sympathetic consideration and co-operation in trying to make these standards effective in the District of Columbia."

McReynolds declined to comment on the letter last night. The Board of Public Welfare at the time said that Dr. Smith was dismissed "for the good of the service."

"The Board of Public Welfare considered the situation carefully, made a thorough investigation and acted only after the most painstaking deliberation," commented Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, last night. "It acted unanimously, and so, I understand, did the Commissioners."

Wallace Will Agree To Any Cotton Plan

By the Associated Press.

A delegation of cotton State congressmen said yesterday Secretary Wallace advised them he would accept whatever type of cotton control legislation is agreed upon by House and Senate agricultural committees.

Chairman Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, of the House Agriculture sub-committee on cotton, said the Administration farm chief had expressed preference in the committee members' conference with him for a control plan that provided marketing quotas and penalty taxes.

Accused of having used an "inelegant but expressive expression" in describing a police officer, John P. Wright, 4208 Fourteenth street northwest, was found guilty of disorderly conduct in Police Court yesterday. Sentence, however, was suspended by Judge Hobart Newman.

Witnesses said Wright, with his brother and a friend, were leaving Griffith Stadium Saturday when a car occupied by two police officers sped by on its way to answer a call to the scene of an attempted murder. Wright said he jumped back as the car passed, expostulated and was arrested after the officers stopped the car. He pleaded not guilty.
